War Information Office Asks Increasing Effort To Speed Up Production

'We Could Lose This War,' Statement Says; June Output Far Below Promises to Allies

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (P)—The Office of War Information, warning that "we could lose this war," declared tonight that production of fighting planes, tanks, most types of artillery, and naval vessels fell behind schedule in June and that increasing sacrifices must be made by civilians if the war program is to be successful.

Presenting a gloomy and critical review of the military and production situation at the present time, OWI asserted that individual Americans had made great sacrifices but "as a nation we are not yet more than ankle deep in the war."

Referring by indirection to demands for the opening of a second front in Europe, the OWI declared that "popular pressure for action on this front or that of the many possible fronts can serve no useful purpose."

Seek Maximum Results
American military forces are being disposed "as and where the military commanders believe they get the maximum of results," and "when we cannot be strong and hit hard everywhere, we must be able to hit hard where it counts most even at the price of leaving other areas inactive," OWI said.

"We always knew that, for us, 1942 would be largely a year of preparation, and that our allies would have to do most of the fighting during most of the year. Before we can do much of the fighting we must move great numbers of men and vast masses of material over enormous distances."

"This job, so far, has been done with entire success; but we are going to have to keep on doing it, in increasing volume, until the war is won."

Not Sufficient Help
The review declared that our allies thus far have carried most of the load "and we have not given them as much help as we had led them to expect." This was due partly to enemy victories, the review added, but "by and large, we have not been producing war material to the maximum of available capacity and have not been getting that material to the fighting fronts in the time and in the volume that will be needed to win."

"We are deep in what may be the decisive year of the war," the review continued. "But 1942 will be the decisive year only if our enemies do not succeed in inflicting crippling losses on us."

Willkie Confers With Roosevelt Discusses Prospective Trip Abroad To Aid in War Effort

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (P)—Wendell Willkie, Republican candidate for president in 1940, discussed with President Roosevelt today a prospective trip abroad, but he said that that was all he could say about his conference with the chief executive.

Willkie attended a White House luncheon in honor of Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, and then talked with the chief executive at considerable length afterward. Likewise remaining behind after the luncheon were the men at the head of America's armed forces.

Biddle Orders Probe of Publication Of News on the Battle of Midway

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (P)—Atorney General Francis Biddle announced tonight that a grand jury investigation would be started immediately at Chicago into the publication "by certain newspapers on Sunday, June 7, 1942, of confidential information concerning the battle of Midway."

Biddle said he had directed the investigation as a result of a preliminary inquiry and upon the recommendation of the Navy department.

Gandhi Demands End of British Power in India

Calls on Followers To Join Campaign of Civil Disobedience

By PRESTON GROVER

BOMBAY, Aug. 7 (P)—In the bizarre setting of a canvas pavilion fitted with electric fans and a public-address system, Mohandas K. Gandhi called on his nationalist followers today to rise with him in an unprecedented mass campaign of civil disobedience aimed at driving the British out of power in all India.

"Our movements for freedom in the past will become insignificant compared with the forthcoming movement," the frail little ascetic orator declared as he sat motionless, bare above the waist, his bare legs crossed on a couch before which a microphone had been adjusted.

"Now is the occasion when we will have to rise."

Yet with this dramatic summons to action he coupled warnings that the campaign must be passive, that he would not tolerate violence, and that Japanese invasion would be "a dangerous thing—you must remove it from your minds."

Addressee 10,000
Ten thousand spectators heard him in a hush so deep that the hum of the electric fans was clearly audible throughout his address.

The occasion was the opening of an all-India congress party session called to sanction a resolution which will make Gandhi the non-violent generalissimo of the independence drive. Approval perhaps tomorrow is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The Congress party's working committee just prior to the opening today authorized its president, as soon as the resolution is endorsed, to appeal to President Roosevelt, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China and Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to Britain, to support the demand that Great Britain grant India independence immediately.

Britain's previous offers of dominion status after the war is over have been rejected, not only by the all-India congress party, but by other major factions in the vast diversity of religions and politics among India's nearly 400,000,000 people.

Those diversities were evident still today, with leaders of various hues of opinion suggesting one thing and another as a "solution" to the perennial Indian problem.

Not Against Russia
Addressing the 360 Congress party delegates and the thousands of others who had paid up to 100 rupees each for places inside the canvas-walled field, Gandhi declared

Small Boats Used To Rush Supplies To Rommel Forces Speedy Motor Craft Seen in Large Numbers, Allen Reports

By LARRY ALLEN

WITH THE BRITISH EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN FLEET, Aug. 7 (P)—Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel is counting on speedy motor torpedo boats and barges to bring what he needs quickly: gasoline and ammunition.

The sudden appearance of increasing numbers of these small craft in the vicinity of Matruh and Sidi Barrani indicates he is hoping they can keep his advanced lines at El Alamein supplied while Axis cargo ships escorted by warships pour materials and men into Tobruk and Benghazi.

Saves Long Haul
Whatever the enemy gets in by speedboat to Matruh and Sidi Barrani saves just that much from the long overland haul through sandstorms and blistering heat. That is why Rommel has clung so tenaciously to these two small, shallow-water ports despite smashing bombardments by the British fleet and heavy nightly raids by American and British planes.

Large Boats Useless
British naval guns made Matruh virtually useless for large ships, while only small craft were able to get into Sidi Barrani even under the best of conditions.

Nevertheless, within the past fortnight naval air reconnaissance shows there has been a constant line of barges and E-boats operating about these ports. They have received severe poundings by air and sea but still they come.

EIGHT NURSES IN ONE FAMILY AID WAR EFFORT

The Red Cross would have no difficulty in filling its quota of 50,000 nurses for army service if there were more families like the Tollettes of San Antonio, Texas. Eight sisters are all nurses, and they are taking an active part in aiding the war effort. Left to right, they are: Mrs. Harold Mussey, Mrs. Walter Kurz, Grace Tollette, Agnes Tollette, Mrs. C. E. Grand, Evelyn, Geraldine, and Mary Tollette.

JAPANESE SINKING RUSSIAN SHIPS, REP. MAGNUSON SAYS

Japan Is Already at War with Russia, Congressman from the State of Washington Declares

SEATTLE, Aug. 7 (P)—"Japan is already at war with Russia and it is common knowledge in Washington, D. C., that the Japs have already sunk several Russian ships in the Pacific," Rep. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.), a member of the Naval Affairs committee, said today in an interview.

"The last was sunk very recently," he said. "They are justifying their action on the ground that the Russians were carrying American materials."

He said he knew only in a general way of the sinking of Russian ships by Japanese submarines. He said he had heard the name of the vessel most recently sunk in the north Pacific but had forgotten it.

Gives Time of Start
"War between Japan and Russia started," he told interviewers, "when the Japs began strengthening their forces in Manchuria, and when they seized Attu and Kiska islands in the Aleutians."

"It is generally believed in Washington that the Japs went into Attu and Kiska for three reasons. First, they beat us to it. They knew we'd be there sooner or later in offensive action against the Japs' home islands."

"Secondly, they wanted weather information from that area. Because the weather moves northwest to southeast across the continent from the North Pacific, they are now in a position to know what kind of weather we're having along the west coast and in the northern interior."

Straddle Supply Line
"But the last and perhaps the most important reason was to be able to straddle the Russian supply line from the American west coast."

He said that "as far as an invasion stepping stone, Attu and Kiska are out. The Japs could just as easily assemble an invasion force in their home islands and sail by Kiska on their way east. If they were going to invade Alaska they would go right on by the Aleutians."

"In fact," he added, "I don't know of a better place for 20,000 Japs to be occupied than in Kiska and Attu. They're no good until they're taken off again."

Two Pilots Killed In Plane Crash
CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Aug. 7 (P)—A two-motored army plane crashed about five miles east of Shadwell this afternoon, killing its two occupants.

The flyers killed were not identified immediately.

Reports received at the University of Virginia airport, located about five miles from the scene of the crash, were that a motor caught fire just before the plane went into a spin and crashed. Boyd Charlie, airport manager, said he understood that the dead flyers were ferry pilots.

Police Lieutenant Testifies
Police Lieut. Alexander L. Emerson, head of the headquarters division vice squad, first to take the witness stand, testified Kennedy had struck him five or six times during a raid on James Heaps' tavern July 12 and attempted to take a prisoner from his custody.

Emerson said he had gone to the tavern at 3 a. m. July 12 to investigate a complaint that liquor was being sold there after the 2 a. m. closing hour.

He arrested Heaps, he said, after an entrance had been effected.

Kennedy followed the officers and their prisoner to a police car, Emerson testified, demanding the release of Heaps.

"About half way to the car Mr. Kennedy grabbed me from behind, still demanding that I let Heaps go," said Emerson.

"I told him to get away from there and stop interfering, he then started beating on my back with his fists and struck me five or six times," the lieutenant added.

"Grabbed" by the Arm
Emerson said he placed Heaps in the police car when Kennedy "rushed up again. He grabbed me by the American Railroads Face Serious Problem in Carrying Big War Load

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (P)—A warning that without additional locomotives, cars and other equipment the railroads might be unable to carry the mounting American war load came today from the chief of the new army transportation corps.

Brigadier General Charles P. Gross said the carriers were approaching "a rather serious and even critical condition," and that next year would bring even heavier demands than 1942.

"The railroads already have about used up their reserves of surplus equipment," he told reporters. "Right now because of ship sinkings they are obliged to use some 1,200 locomotives to haul oil which were available last year for other traffic movements."

"Since 1939, car loadings have increased twenty-seven per cent, ton miles of freight eighty per cent and passenger travel has nearly doubled. This year will see thirty-four per cent more ton miles of freight moved than in 1929 and forty-eight per cent more than 1918, the peak year of the first world war."

Gross complained at a press conference that new equipment had not kept pace with increasing traffic, but expressed hope the situation eventually would be relieved.

He said the Association of American Railroads was "geared to war better than any other agency."

The army's most critical transportation problem is the flow of troops and supplies to ports, and the railroads are the main reliance for this purpose, he explained.

Australia Needs Greater Relief, Writer Asserts

American Equipment Must Be Provided, Correspondent Says

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, AUSTRALIA, Aug. 7 (P)—General Douglas MacArthur was described today by Norman Stockton, war correspondent of the Melbourne Herald, as an "offensive-minded" leader who "has been placed in the position where apparently he cannot take the offensive."

"The United States has considered that this country (Australia), in the wider strategy of global war, must play a secondary role for the balance of 1942 — perhaps longer," Stockton asserted.

At the same time an authoritative source, whose identity could not be disclosed, declared that the greatest part of Australian defense forces are Australian, not American, and that both the Australian and American public have been somewhat confused concerning the real facts of the situation.

Not Enough Equipment
American equipment which has been sent to Australia is a "trickle" which could be replaced by three days of United States war production, he said, adding that in the main Australia was carrying her own load.

Stockton said that "by sacrificing the initiative which material aid would have permitted we have lost Gona, Tulagi and Kieta, and the Japanese are constantly nibbling at other islands and other potential bases."

"They are employing every conceivable means of sea transport from launches and schooners to great transports," Stockton continued. "There are many small missions and trading posts and many strategic islands which perhaps

Fate of Eight Nazi Saboteurs Remains Unknown Roosevelt Still Studying Testimony Obtained by Commission

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (P)—There was no indication tonight as to when the fate of the eight alleged Nazi saboteurs would be announced.

The White House merely let stand a statement by the chief executive that he had not yet completed his study of testimony obtained by a military commission which tried the men on charges they came to America on Nazi submarines to destroy key war installations.

Mr. Roosevelt said late Tuesday he would finish his review of the case in "two or three days." But in the three days that have elapsed he has had relatively little time to devote to the voluminous documents laid before him by the military commission, since Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands has been a White House guest.

In response to an inquiry about an International News Service story that the chief executive had approved death sentences for six of the saboteurs, William D. Hassett, assistant presidential secretary, told reporters "the president has not yet concluded his reading of testimony in the saboteur case."

The chief executive himself repeated that assertion at a press conference.

There was a possibility that any executions which might be ordered would precede an announcement of the sentences meted out.

German Armies Plunging Deeper into Caucasus in Drive for Big Oil Fields

Moscow Acknowledges Retreat To New Line in Direction of Armavir; Germans Drive Wedge toward City of the Volga in Spite of Furious Attacks by Reinforced Russian Armies

MOSCOW, Saturday, Aug. 8 (P)—German armies plunging deeper into the Caucasus have driven to the Armavir area within sixty miles of the Maikop oil fields while other Nazi forces moved closer toward the threatened Volga city of Stalingrad, the Russians announced officially today.

Indicating that the Nazi masses had stormed across the vital Kuban river in the Western Caucasus, the midnight communique reported that fierce engagements were being fought in the Armavir area and to the south of Kusechvka.

Armavir is 160 miles south of Rostov on the Rostov-Baku railroad. It is almost on the Kuban river, slightly to the west of that waterway.

The midnight report told of the new reverse in the Caucasus in these terse phrases:

RETREAT TO NEW LINE
"In the area south of Belaya Glinka our troops have been waging defensive battles for several days against advancing German Fascist troops. After bloody battles against superior enemy forces our troops retreated to a new defense line in the direction of Armavir."

The violent battles of the Don bend, where some of the biggest tank engagements of the war were being fought, continued without let-up.

Allied Leaders Meet in Russia To Plan Attacks British and American Leaders Discuss Ways To Win the War

By E. C. DANIEL

LONDON, Aug. 7 (P)—Urgent conferences on means to save Russia now as an essential to winning of the war were reported in session at Moscow today among strategists and diplomats of the United Nations. This information came from sources whose identity could not be disclosed.

Known to be conferring with Russian military leaders in the Kremlin were: Admiral William H. Standley, American ambassador to Russia who flew from the alternate capital at Kuibyshev;

Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley of the United States air force, who flew to Moscow from the United States with a personal message from President Roosevelt to Premier Joseph Stalin;

Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, British ambassador to Russia who flew from Kuibyshev to the Kremlin;

Roger Garreau, head of the fighting French mission to Russia;

Maj. Gen. William Stiffens, Norwegian military attaché to Kuibyshev.

The established presence of these conferees suggested that others representing their own and other United Nations were in Moscow to help determine how to relieve the pressure on the Red armies defending the Caucasus oil and the Volga lifeline of supply.

Indeed, Axis radio broadcasts of the last several days have rumored that Prime Minister Churchill had been in Moscow along with William C. Bullitt, special envoy of President Roosevelt.

Axis sources several days ago put out the rumor that Premier Stalin had gone to the southern front to direct the defense of the Caucasus

Gigantic Magnesium Plant Rising In the Desert Near Boulder City

BOULDER CITY, Nev., Aug. 7 (P)—So you thought the building of Boulder dam was a big affair? Well, it was.

But Basic Magnesium, Inc., is gigantic. That's the new plant rising on the desert near here, which at full capacity will make thirty times more magnesium than was produced in the entire world six years ago.

That's just one startling item of information about the project. There are lots of others that the War Production Board labels confidential, but here are a few it approves for public consumption:

German Attacks Repulsed

The communique declared several German attacks were repulsed in the Kilekaya area, some seventy-five miles northwest of Stalingrad. One guards unit alone was said to have hurled back seventeen enemy tank attacks and destroyed more than 100 tanks.

But the Russians acknowledged, the Germans had pushed a wedge north of Kotelnikowski closer to Stalingrad. Just how far this German threat carried toward the city of the Volga named for Joseph Stalin was not disclosed. Kotelnikowski is ninety-five miles southwest of Stalingrad and below the Don river.

Hurl Tanks Into Action

In that battle the Germans were reported hurling tanks and automatic riflemen into the wedge their power had driven into the Soviet defenses.

Japan May Open Own Second Front

Tokyo Radio Hints Russia Will Be Attacked Soon

NEW YORK, Aug. 7 (P)—The Tokyo radio tonight broadcast Japanese editorial comment containing the first hints from there that Japan herself might open a second front with an attack on Russia in Siberia.

The broadcast noted reports of the arrival in Moscow of Allied representatives and said the moves in the Russian capital were "indicative of further Anglo-American machinations aimed to open up a second front to save the Soviet union from collapse."

The Japanese press, the radio added, pointed out that formation of a second front was not necessarily restricted to European or western Asia or Africa.

There have been various reports, particularly from Chinese quarters, that Japan had massed a large army in eastern Asia for an attack on Siberia.

Kaiser To Build Big Cargo Planes For War Service

West Coast Shipbuilder Gets Permission To Go Ahead With Plans

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (AP)—Henry J. Kaiser, the phenomenal west-coast shipbuilder, obtained permission today to go ahead with his plans for building huge seventy-ton cargo planes.

The War Production Board gave its approval to the construction of 100 of the flying freight cars, with four hundred additional to be built later if the experiment is successful.

In any event, said Donald M. Nelson, the WPB chairman, the project hinges upon whether the planes can be built without eating into materials needed for building combat planes. On this score, Nelson was optimistic.

"I have hopes," he said. "At least we can try."

Will Speed Production

Kaiser, who has been in Washington endeavoring to sell the idea to officials here, will hurry back to the coast, Nelson added, draw up estimates of the materials and facilities needed, how soon production can begin and where the planes are to be built, and then return to Washington.

The shipbuilder himself told reporters that 500 flying boats was so small a number that there would be no difficulty about materials. WPB's action, he thought, was "the beginning of a great cargo plane program."

This program, he added, would not interfere with the construction of cargo ships.

"We began with only thirty ships for Britain a year ago last January," he said. "We have delivered more than one hundred, 10,000-tonners already with only two cities working and we have a backlog of several hundred."

Will "Keep Building"

This program would continue, he said, because he had "never been known to stop anything" and wanted to "keep building."

A WPB official meanwhile told reporters Kaiser would need to construct only one building for the plane production program and had "excellent ideas about building it mainly from scrap and other comparatively plentiful materials."

One of Kaiser's associates, explaining the procedure of authorizing the plane program, said a letter of intent would be issued to Kaiser next week and signed either by the navy or by Nelson on behalf of the navy.

Australia Needs

have succumbed to the invader already. "Land based planes can roam further into the Coral sea where once we defeated them. They can escort Japanese along the entire Papua coast. Japanese troops are about sixty miles from the only big allied base in the southwest Pacific outside of Continental Australia."

The Owen Stanley range of mountains which is now the chief land bulwark against land invasion of Western Papua has been described by a general headquarters spokesman as "almost impassable" but the Japanese advanced across more impassable and more rugged mountains in China and Burma.

"Too Many Rosy Stories"

"They cut the Burma road in Yunnan province within sight of the highest mountains in the world. Australia has been told too many rosy stories about United States military aid. The American press has fed the American public similar lines. I have spoken to seasoned Australian pilots from England and the Middle East who are staggered at the odds our bombers and fighters pit themselves against in the air war in the north."

"Only by the presence of carriers in the Coral Sea were we able to smash the initial Japanese attempt to invade the north. Those carriers may not be available again. I believe there are all the elements of grave danger to Australia unless the policy that is sacrificing this area because of demands from other fronts is changed in the immediate future."

"Fighting Losing War"

"The answer to Japan's southward drive, which may be resumed in real earnest in the not distant future, is sufficient bombers to blast their ships from the sea and sufficient first class fighters to protect the bases."

"We and the people who are our allies have got to realize the grim fact that we are still fighting a losing war and that there is no possibility of an offensive from this country until real material aid is forthcoming."

and his namesake city, Stalingrad. It was said in Moscow today that General Bradley had not yet had the opportunity to deliver Mr. Roosevelt's message to Stalin.

Another Axis broadcast launched the report that Laurence A. Steinhardt, former United States ambassador to Russia and now the American envoy to Turkey, had gone to Moscow from Ankara, but Moscow dispatches said he was not there and not expected.

British official sources maintained a fast silence on the Moscow conference except to disclose that their ambassador was in on them.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A grave possibility that the left wing of the Russian army of the Caucasus, which Moscow says is still battling Nazi invaders south of Kuchneva, has been trapped was indicated by Berlin versions of the south Russian battle.

The Germans claimed also capture of important Armavir junction, more than 100 miles to the south, and penetration of Russian lines across the Kuban to within thirty miles of the Maikop oil field.

It still seems possible, however, that the fighting along the Yezh river, south of Kuchneva, is a rearward action to cover Red retreat below the Kuban in the sector between the Azov sea coast and the line of the Rostov-Baku railway.

Believe Reds Escaped

German claims of the capture of Yezh, Azov sea port seventy miles due west of Kuchneva, the lower end of the bay of Taganrog, tends, however, to confirm the impression that the main body of the Russian forces in the northwest corner of the Caucasus above the Kuban may have made good its escape to the Yezh river line.

If that be true, it seems obvious that the front the army of the Caucasus still hoped to hold on the left was the Kuban-Laba line, backed by the foothills of the northern end of the Caucasus range. This front would cover all approaches to Maikop and the oil pipeline from Maikop to Tuapse on the Black Sea, important as an advance fueling base for Russian Black Sea warfare.

Berlin asserts, however, that Nazi units not only are approaching Krasnodar on the Kuban seventy miles northwest of Maikop; but have pushed to within thirty miles of Maikop in that sector. If that is true it means the Kuban defense

German Armies

Germans in the Voronezh sector at the northern end of the front were reported to have forced a crossing of the upper Don river and occupied two large populated places.

The Russians are attempting to relieve the pressure on the south by the action around Voronezh. At sea, the Russians said, Red fleet warships operating in the Baltic sank an enemy transport of 10,000 tons. No details on this feat were given.

But with all the Russian resistance bolstered now by reserves, the penetration into the Caucasus in the Armavir region was the deepest thus far reported by the Soviets in that important sector.

(German military sources yesterday said the Nazis have captured Armavir.)

Nazi Forces Checked

The fresh reserves apparently were checking the superior Nazi forces in all save the area below Belaya Gmina, through which the German tanks have plunged toward Armavir and the Maikop oil fields. Both sides constantly were engaging more forces as the battle for the Caucasus and the Volga rose to even greater fury.

In the great Don bend seventy-five miles northwest of Stalingrad, the tank battle became so violent that the lumbering machines frequently broke into infantry ranks, grinding down German foot troops. A dispatch from Kletskaya to Comsomol Pravda said hundreds of Germans died beneath steel treads of ponderous Russian machines.

The southern arm of the German envelopment drive against the industrial city on the Volga was reported blocked by stout Russian defense.

The threat to Stalingrad from this area was far greater than in the Kletskaya region, because the intervening Volga plains offer little natural defense positions. As the hour of decision approached in the tremendous struggles, Allied representatives were assembling here for urgent conferences with top Russian officials to devise means of funneling more tanks, planes and cannon to the front.

Third Successive Bombing Attack On Ruhr Valley

Big Industrial Center and River Ports Blasted by the RAF

LONDON, Aug. 7 (AP)—The RAF sent a strong force of bombers through the thick weather to the Ruhr valley for the third successive night last night, blasting the big industrial center and inland river port of Duisburg and other points.

The air ministry acknowledged that six planes were missing after these attacks and other raids on Nazi airdromes in the low countries, but did not disclose the number of participating planes. However, a British source said that in the days before the 1,000-bomber raids last night's force would have been regarded as "a whopper."

German Towns Damaged

The German high command admitted there had been material damage to buildings and said the raids had caused some casualties in residential quarters in several towns. It claimed seven British bombers were shot down.

The last raid on Duisburg, the site of many war industries, was the night of July 25, the fourth such attack in six nights.

The Luftwaffe sent only a small force against Britain in attacks on Scotland and East Anglia last night, and this afternoon a few raiders dropped bombs in three places in the southwest of England, causing a small number of casualties.

Germans Drop Bombs

Last night's Nazi raiders dropped high explosives and incendiaries, including a new type of phosphorus fire bomb for which the public had been prepared by a home security ministry bulletin. Fires they started were extinguished with a minimum of damage.

blows on our allies before the year is out.

"Even if they fail in that they will still take a lot of licking."

"But, if they should paralyze the striking power of Russia or wear down the endurance of China, or break the British power in the Middle East, the war will be decided in some later year not now foreseen, and victory will be far more costly."

Japs Holding Rubber

Asserting that the military forces had done "pretty well but not well enough," OWI said "we held the Central Pacific and reinforced Australia; but he (the enemy) still holds the Philippines, and the Dutch Islands and the rubber that we need."

The situation at home likewise is a job done "pretty well but not well enough," OWI asserted.

"Our production, measured by our standards of a couple of years ago is amazing; measured against what we need to win, it is not yet enough. In June we fell slightly below schedule in total military planes, in total combat planes, and in most of the individual types; we made more planes than any other country in the world, but we did not make as many as we said we were going to make. The same is true of tanks, of most types of artillery and of naval vessels—particularly the small craft needed to fight submarines."

June Bad Month

In July, the review said, the curve of submarine sinkings throughout the world started downward, while it was hoped this trend would continue, "production of small vessels for the anti-submarine campaign is still lagging and in June was less than half of schedule."

"Even if shipbuilding continued to rise and sinkings to decrease, we shall probably be well into 1943 before we again have as much merchant shipping as we had on December 7, 1941," the review declared.

OWI was critical of "faulty control of inventories and of flow of materials" which it said had forced some temporary shutdowns in war plants. The review added, however, that the war production drive was taking a new turn to emphasize output of materials and that "mistakes made this time were perhaps unavoidable and will not be made again."

"But, their consequences will be with us for some time to come," the review added, "and the resolution not to repeat them must be backed up by an intensified effort on the entire nation."

Declaring that there was no doubt that the American people meant to win the war, OWI contended there was doubt "that all of us realize how hard we are going to have to work to win it."

Resources Misunderstood

"Too many people seem to feel that we are fighting this war out of a surplus—a surplus of resources and productive capacity, a surplus of time," OWI said. "That is not true. We have plenty of some resources; in others we are a have-not nation."

"We should all like to believe for instance that we are going to have all the rubber we need for pleasure driving as well as for military and essential civilian uses. But there is no present prospect of that; if people eagerly believe everybody who tells them that there is going to be plenty of rubber, they are only fooling themselves and helping the enemy."

This country is fighting a war against an enemy "with whom no honorable peace is possible," the

Former Husband Comes To Aid of Eleanor Williams

Clarence Williams Hopes To Help Her in Murder Case

CHICAGO, Aug. 7 (AP)—The former husband of Mrs. Eleanor Williams 25, platinum blonde night club dice girl, came to her aid today as a coroner's jury recommended she be held to the grand jury on a charge of murdering her lover, Gordon McNaughton, 32.

The ex-husband, Clarence Williams, 36, a telegrapher, embraced and kissed Eleanor at the inquest, talked to her privately and patted her blonde head comfortingly, then told reporters: "I still love her. I'll do all I can to help her."

Williams divorced her in 1939. She told police she left him and their daughter Jacqueline, 6, for McNaughton, a postal substation clerk who once pitched for the Boston Red Sox.

Another blonde in McNaughton's life, Mrs. Dorothy Moos, 27, in whose hotel room he was shot to death yesterday, testified that Mrs. Williams burst into the room, argued and fought and, after Mrs. Moos had once snatched a pistol from her, shot McNaughton.

Mrs. Moos told investigators she had left her husband several weeks ago for McNaughton.

Mrs. Williams did not testify at the inquest, but told police she took the weapon from policeman Barney Towey, an old friend, while he slept in a hotel room after they had been out to a night club.

Police Commissioner James P. Allman suspended Towey.

British Planes Close Together In Cologne Raid

Had Trouble Not To Hit Each Other, American Reports

BALTIMORE, Aug. 7 (AP)—British planes followed British plane so closely during the RAF's mass raid on Cologne in late May that the pilots' chief concern was to avoid bumping into each other, a Baltimorean with the RAF told his wife in a letter today.

"Over the target we weren't worried about the defenses so much as bumping into other aircraft," RAF Flight Sergeant Michael Stein Jacobs wrote.

"Everywhere you looked there were planes. It seemed like one big formation."

"This was the conversation over the 'intercom' (the plane's intercommunication system), especially from the rear gunner: 'Hello, captain, two Wellingtons on the starboard, one Halifax just above, and I think there's a Sterling right behind.'"

Sergeant Jacobs said that on their return British fliers commented on the number of their own planes they saw, and one rear gunner remarked facetiously:

"Yeah, I saw a traffic cop just as we passed the Dutch coast and he was waving and shouting 'this way.'"

"That raid was a real thrill and something I certainly didn't want to miss," Jacobs added, although there will be more, it was exciting to be in the first one."

Mrs. Jacobs also received a cablegram from her husband after another of the RAF's great raids on Germany, saying simply:

"Dropped a big one on Hamburg for you."

Willkie Confers

There was speculation that Willkie might visit some fighting fronts as well as United Nations' capitals, partly on a fact-finding mission such as he took to England last year.

It would be necessary, of course, under war-time restrictions, for Willkie to obtain permission of the American government and also of the governments of countries he would visit, prior to his leaving United States soil. There has been widespread speculation that Willkie might visit India, the current trouble spot.

It was understood, however, that he would be back in this country by mid-October.

"Hit it right on the nose," said Bill.

I gasped back, "Swell shot." The boys tell me dive bombing is really enjoyable when you drop live bombs on real targets with the "ack ack" booming you around.

Roosevelt Again Gives Sen. Meade Political Boost

Denies New York Candidate Is in Any Way an Isolationist

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt spoke up again today for Senator Mead (D-N.Y.) who is seeking the Democratic nomination for governor of New York.

Asked at a press conference to comment on charges that Mead was an isolationist before the outbreak of the war, Mr. Roosevelt said Mead was no more an isolationist than he himself was.

Previously Mr. Roosevelt had said that if he had a vote in the Democratic state convention, he would cast it for Mead. The senator is opposed by State Attorney General John J. Bennett, who has the backing of James A. Farley, Mr. Roosevelt's old campaign manager and former postmaster general.

Assailed by Farley

Farley said recently that in a speech in 1941 Mead "convicted himself of being an isolationist and not in sympathy with the president's foreign policies."

Without mentioning Farley's name, a reporter asked the president today for comment on the charge. Mr. Roosevelt said that he was not talking politics or engaging in the campaign but that if Jim Mead was an isolationist he himself was one, too.

In response to other questions, Mr. Roosevelt said he did not plan to go to Hyde Park to vote in next Tuesday's primary election since there was not much of a contest for the Democratic Congressional nomination.

No Vote against Fish

He chuckled and said he was not permitted to vote in the Republican Congressional primary, in which Rep. Hamilton Fish is seeking renomination against opponents who have made an issue of Fish's pre-war opposition to Roosevelt foreign policies.

"Would you like to?" a reporter inquired.

Mr. Roosevelt laughed and replied emphatically that he would.

appeared like little clouds which rise up when you toss pennies into a dust pile.

At 14,000 feet we were flying along beautifully. The sea, clouds and mountains were all in their proper places.

Then Came the Dive

Then our wings flipped up, our flaps snapped open and we went into a dive.

I really don't remember much of what I saw on the way down. My eyes never got properly focused. There is a confused impression of white sand, blue surf, brown earth all rushing up toward us in a whirling kaleidoscope of color.

Then just as the landscape was beginning to unscramble itself and I was beginning to enjoy it, Pilot Bill Henry of Bakersfield, Calif., pulled out at less than a thousand feet.

Something lifted me out of my seat and panned me against the safety belt and the gun mount. My lungs, head and ears all felt like they were going to burst. From long forgotten tale of test pilots, I suddenly thought of the letter "G"—a pilot's symbol of gravitational pull. Nine G's meant black-out for pilots. I wondered how many G's we'd pulled.

University Opens Training Courses Free of Tuition

Men and Women Will Be Given Instructions in Seven Groups

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Aug. 7 (AP)—A series of war training courses at the University of Maryland opened today to both men and women, free of tuition.

Nearly thirty courses, divided into seven groups, are offered by the university. Dean S. S. Steinberg of the university's College of Engineering announced, in both day and night classes at College Park, Baltimore, Hagerstown and Aberdeen, Md., and Washington, D. C.

Only requisite for admission, Dean Steinberg said, was a High School diploma and he urged interested persons, especially women, to write him at once at the University of Maryland.

The courses are offered as part of the program of engineering, science and management war training in cooperation with the United States Office of Education.

The seven main groups of courses are: Administration and management. Aeronautical drafting and design. Engineering materials and inspection.

Fundamentals of engineering. Radio and communications. Safety and protection.

Surveying and mapping.

Persons whose businesses have been closed as a result of the war were urged to enroll, and Dean Steinberg said that although employment was not guaranteed, positions have generally been secured for all persons completing "the courses."

Naval "Sources" Quoted

Horton said that the three newspapers he named published a story stating that the strength of the Japanese naval forces engaged in the battle of Midway was known in advance in American naval circles. The story cited as its authority "reliable sources in the naval intelligence."

The story carried a complete listing of both the enemy's striking force and the occupation force which were engaged and turned back for American naval and air forces.

They are lowered into the pipes on ropes, work a maximum of thirty minutes at a time and are hauled out the moment they stop wiggling. If you're curious about magnetism:

It's a highly valuable war production metal, which composes 2.24 per cent of the earth's crust, more than ten per cent of sea water. It is eighth among the elements in abundance, yet nowhere is found in a free state. Its reduction, therefore, requires a precise application of electro-chemistry and a large plant outlay.

McKeldin Scores O'Connor, Attacks Md. Voting Law

Promises To Work For Repeal of Declaration of Intentions

BALTIMORE, Aug. 7 (AP)—Theodore R. McKeldin, Republican aspirant for governor, coupled an attack on Governor O'Connor today with a broadside against Maryland's voting law.

In a prepared radio speech (WBAL), McKeldin chided the governor for a second-front speech last week and asked, "Is it a mere coincidence that the critical days of this war, according to the governor, coincide with the period of his gubernatorial campaign; or is his statement a significant revelation of the governor's mental operations?"

Will Seek Repeal

Discussing the requirement that prospective voters "make a declaration of their intention to become Maryland citizens" one year before they become eligible to vote, McKeldin called it a "heinous statute" and promised to work for its repeal if he were elected governor at the general elections.

McKeldin is one of two candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Blames O'Connor

"For two generations," McKeldin said, "the Republican party has struggled to repeal this indefensible legal obstacle against the exercise of the voting privilege. At the last session of the legislature, a repeal bill was 'killed' by the Democratic legislature which, as we all know, was under the absolute domination of Governor O'Connor."

McKeldin asked support of President Roosevelt's war program an "earnest consideration" of the "importance of maintaining in Maryland the two-party system."

arm and then caught Heaps' arm and tried to pull him out of the car."

"Officer Heck tried to pull Kennedy away and he struck the officer across the face with the back of his hand. It was then I ordered him arrested," Emerson said.

Other members of the vice squad subsequently called, supported Emerson's testimony.

Kennedy, however, denied having been in Heaps' tavern that night. He said he had gone to a motion picture show, a downtown hotel, a church and a downtown hotel, a church where he said he remained a half hour.

Returning to his home following the mass Kennedy said he was attracted by a crowd that had gathered in front of Heaps' tavern.

Says He Opposed Violence

Kennedy testified he had advised Heaps to go along with the officer quietly.

"They have done you a dirty trick and have no right in smacking in your door, but go along quietly and don't make any trouble," he asserted he said.

Heaps, called to the stand, testified he did not see Kennedy's any officer and said Kennedy advised him to go with the officer quietly.

Where Independence Is Direly Needed

THE CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR makes some sensible remarks about that "flicker of independence" in Congress, which it rightly declares should not only be supported but increased.

"Both in the House and Senate," it says, "there are independents who continue to express their opinions of the conditions and needs of the country. These minorities were not built on a partisan plan. They include a number of Republican senators and a large majority of the Republican members of the House. They also include Democrats like Tydings and Byrd, Wheeler and the two Clarks in the Senate; Doughton, Hatton Summers and E. E. Cox in the House.

"It would seem fairly obvious that Americans who want to preserve their old form of government will not have a hand in driving out of public life the men who compose these independent groups."

And, conversely, if they want to preserve that form, they should see to it that those who are not sufficiently independent of bossism to make their representation what it should be are driven out for, as the Times-Star says, "once we get a Congress composed altogether of 'yes men'—and we are dangerously on the edge of that very thing right now, if, indeed, we have not for all practicable purposes gone over the edge—'working democracy' will be only a memory in the United States."

What the Times-Star says applies with especial timeliness to the Maryland delegation in the House, which is composed of yes-sir members who not only admit their subservience to White House dictation but actually boast of it. They should be supplanted by members who not only know the needs and conditions of the country but also their own minds and who will not be afraid to express themselves in accordance with their honest convictions.

Machine Bosses Run Into More Trouble

THE O'CONNOR-CURRAN-JACKSON COMBINATION is reported as running into more difficulties, these being objections lodged by factional followers in several sections of Baltimore city to their proposals for improving the quality of the General Assembly. In consequence, a new series of conferences has been arranged with the object of eliminating snags that appear to threaten their plan.

Trouble is besetting the coalition candidates in three of the legislative districts of the city, while in addition the hand-picking of unity candidates for the Senate and the House in several of the counties has fanned up much dissatisfaction.

All of this again contributes to the impression that the legislative improvement campaign was pretty much of a machine-building smoke screen, and carries the lesson that monkeying around in a supposedly free-for-all primary is a rather ticklish undertaking.

The Canned Music Ban Blame

THERE IS MUCH to support the contention that James Caesar Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, knew pretty much what he was doing when he banished canned music from the air and from the juke boxes in his declared objective of preventing loss of employment for musicians. There is also good ground for expectation that the courts will be obliged to uphold him in the proceedings started under the anti-trust laws by the department of Justice to curb his style.

That series of developments which began with radio and proceeded through the orthophonic phonograph and sound motion picture to the anti-climax of the juke box caused as great a revolution in the field of music production as the automobile did in transportation.

Perhaps canned music is often atrocious. Maybe it does take some jobs away from small-time noise makers erroneously called bands. Perhaps a juke box is the lowest form of sound production. But it is here, recorded music is widely enjoyed in various ways, and to permit one man to say that it must be abandoned would constitute a shameful page in American history.

But, is Petrillo really the one to blame? He appears to be fully protected by powers conferred on unions by the laws, policies and decisions of the New Deal. In its famous Hutcheson decision, handed down February 2, 1941, the federal supreme court implied that virtually nothing a trade union might do in pursuit of a labor dispute could be considered in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. To justify the ruling the majority opinion in the Norris-LaGuardia act, which "forbids injunctions against union activity under certain conditions. This law, the court said, revealed the will of Congress to let labor leaders or organizations have their way regardless of the issue in dispute and its effect on interstate commerce.

Wherefore, nothing seems to be gained by slamming Petrillo, no matter how much one disapproves of his action. The blame rests elsewhere. Objectors who think there should be some redress should demand it of their congressmen.

A Futile Occupation

THE AXIS PARTNERS have some active American allies who because of ignorance of the actual status of war profits are, unintentionally and unknowingly, serving as very effective demolition squads to attack American morale and carry on campaigns started in the propaganda bureaus of Berlin, Rome and Tokyo. Unwittingly, these individuals who lack accurate facts accuse American industry of excessive profits and thus help the enemy's work along.

To show what the facts really are, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers' Committee on Government Finance, recently made public a study of the corporate finances of four thousand manufacturers. He described the report as "the most authoritative study of corporate finances, as affected by the war, yet undertaken."

Mr. Cowdin, revealing a marked decrease in income available for dividends and profits in contrast to billion dollar increases in volume of production, asserted that "there is less danger of creating war millionaires than of impairing the ability of industry to cope with post-war problems under the present tax proposals."

"Although net profits before taxes have risen from a billion and a half in 1940 to an estimated three and a half billion in 1942, net income after taxes has declined from a little over a billion to something under a billion."

As Mr. Cowdin points out, there are much graver concerns than war millionaires today. In addition to merely being an echo of radio propagandists in Berlin, popular sloganizing against "profiteering" has become a futile occupation and should be replaced by efforts to develop a sincere public concern with the development of industrial stability and financial resourcefulness.

A Columnist Is Confirmed

ONE of the News columnists, David Lawrence, had somewhat of a jump on Lieut.-Gen. William S. Knudsen, director of production for the War department, with respect to a definition of the steel situation.

Two or three days ago, Lawrence set forth evidence to show that the real trouble about steel is not a shortage but a "maldistribution." Comes now Gen. Knudsen with a statement at Philadelphia that there had been "exaggerated" reports of a shortage of steel and that he viewed it not as a shortage "but a maldistribution."

"If you put thousands of people into business making things they've never made before," Gen. Knudsen said, "some of them are likely to accumulate more material than they need and others are likely to run short."

Well, regardless of who pointed this out first, it is reassuring to have official confirmation that there is no actual shortage. Maldistribution being the cause, it can be corrected perhaps much easier than a shortage as the huge lumbering war machine is put into smoother operation.

It must be a new experience to a lot of WAAC's to have the boy friends not making fun of their new hats.

If inflation is to be curbed, somebody will have to devise a new type of curb service.

Salt of the Earth

By MARSHALL MASLIN

There was deep grief in the home. One whom they had always known, on whose strength they had rested, was gone and they would not see him again on earth. Not ever. . . . And the family was dazed and broken and for a little while all was dark before them.

Friends came and offered their sympathy. They sat on chairs and talked of how good and strong had the dead man been. They murmured things about faith and the burden all must bear. They said that perhaps it was all for the best; he was free now from pain. They asked if they could do anything to help and they meant what they said. . . . The telephone rang endlessly. . . . There were many things to do and someone had to take charge and no one felt quite equal to it.

Then came a man who had never been known to use many words. . . . Nor did he use many now. . . . He shook hands silently and put his arm about drooping shoulders. He brought his car and did not go away. He did not interfere, but he remained and he was ready to help. He joined himself to the family. He ran errands. He carried people to the necessary places. He saw that they ate and saw that they slept. He did the little necessary things, those unspectacular things that must be done but that more dramatic individuals do not think of doing. He filled up the gaps in the day and hardly said a word.

He did not speak of his lost friend. He did not try to comfort. Not once did he murmur consolation to anyone. . . . But he made himself an oak in a desolation of sorrow, and after it was all over and the family was by itself once more, lonely and empty of heart, he was still there. . . . There was little more that the sturdy friend could do. He had done everything that the other fellow CAN do when you are suffering. He had given his help generously and quietly and now he was ready to go away.

But they thought of him still. He had lightened the load more than he knew. He had comforted. He had deepened their faith in friendship. He had stood by in their grieving time. And ever afterwards that sturdy "ordinary" fellow remained in their hearts as the best of all comforting friends. Salt of the earth, that's what he'd proved himself to be.

Timoshenko's Army Remains Intact, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—People in this country do not get the picture of the battle in Russia, and consequently may be inclined to overinterpret or underestimate what is happening there.

There is no battle line such as you see daily drawn on sketched maps. The German advance is not that of a solid mass moving forward against a retreating mass a few miles ahead doggedly dying for every inch of territory.

Timoshenko's army has not even fought a major battle in its Ukraine-Caucasus retreat thus far. There have been no such scenes as waves of troops, miles in length, surging and charging against defensive line. It has strictly been a fight of fluid maneuvering without a major engagement.

The German army is broken up into numerous flsts, each an individual unit of tanks and infantry, each pounding forward individually from town to town or place to place. Frequently one advancing flst runs into a Russian unit and there is a scrap for a position.

On the whole, the German campaign can best be visualized as a thousand disconnected flsts pounding forward unevenly.

No Line Attempted

The Russians have not tried to maintain a defense line anywhere, except on the east bank of the Don, from Voronezh southwest to the big bend near Stalingrad. There they have established a fairly good defensive position (not as good as they can and may have to take later on the east bank of the Volga, a much wider and less shallow stream.)

South of Stalingrad, however, where the clashes between the flsts have been more numerous, there has been no semblance of a line. There, Timoshenko has been involved in the desperate and amazingly successful maneuver of withdrawing an army of 200,000 men from the tight pocket in which Hitler caught them around Rostov.

If anyone had said ten days ago that Timoshenko would get 100,000 of these troops safely out of the trap, he would have been considered an optimist. Yet apparently this adroit Red general has succeeded in safely withdrawing most or all of them.

Nazi Claims Lacking

You have heard no claim by the Berlin radio to the capture of any large number of troops in that area, and it certainly would have been made if Hitler had succeeded in his attempt to cut off these forces. Consequently, Timoshenko's army is most certainly so far still intact as this is written.

The German encirclement maneuver has forced him to move constantly back and back, because it has pushed him into an area of level plains, barren of good geographical defenses. The next good line at Timoshenko's back is the mountains of the Caucasus.

There and on the east bank of the Volga, to the north, the Russians certainly have better military positions than they have occupied so far in this war.

Oil Loss Not Fatal

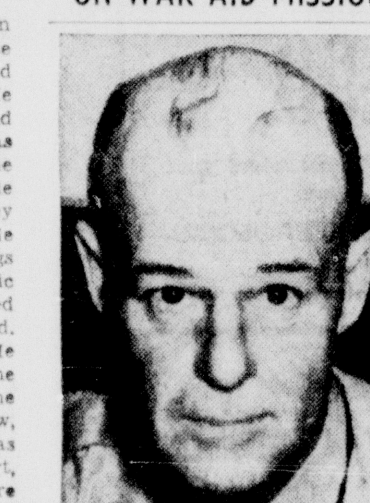

Of course, if they have to go back to these, they lose the Caucasus oil, all the industry and farm supplies of the Don and Donets basins, but until their armies are beaten, the Red cause is not lost.

Their problem now therefore is one of generalship and morale. Some suggestions have been offered that their fighting spirit has not measured up to the superior quality of last winter in some spots, but these reflect isolated cases of one or two trapped divisions.

Morale as a whole seems better than you would expect from a retreating, pocketed army which has not yet been fully engaged. And as long as they have Timoshenko they need not worry about generalship.

To keep a proper perspective on the fluctuations of this war, therefore, you must forget all the old pictures of the Civil war or the trench combat of the World War. No trenches have been dug on the

ON WAR AID MISSION

Maj. Gen. Bradley

Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley, former chief of the First Air Force, United States Eastern Defense Command, arrived in Moscow, after piloting his own plane—a B-24 bomber. The general on a special war-aid mission brought a written message from President Roosevelt to Premier Stalin. Bradley emphasized that his mission was intended to increase the effectiveness of American aid to the Russians.

WARS ARE WON BY PEOPLE WHO DO IMPOSSIBLE THINGS

Dejection over War Not Warranted So Long As Britain Survives, Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

This is a time of gloom in Washington, and, one infers, throughout the country. We are in one of our extremes of national mood.

The immediate cause of our gloom is Hitler's present success against Russia. Before surrendering too completely to this gloom, recall a passage from a speech of Prime Minister Churchill.

"The significance of the passage, and the emotional tonic there is in it, bear in mind the time it was delivered. It was eighteen months ago, on February 9, 1941. At that time Hitler had not yet attacked Russia, and practically no one supposed he would. Russia in fact was thought of then as a semi-alloy of Hitler, and there was no reason to suppose that relation would change. (Though there is a hint of precedence in Churchill's speech.) At that time, Hitler had not yet moved into the Balkans, had not taken Bulgaria nor attacked Yugoslavia nor Greece. In that condition, Churchill said:

"He [Hitler] may carry havoc into the Balkan States; he may tear great provinces out of Russia; he may march to the Caspian; he may march to the gates of India. All this will avail him nothing. He may spread his curse more widely throughout Europe and Asia, but it will not avert his doom. . . . In order to win the war, Hitler must destroy Great Britain."

A Military Fact

That last sentence of Churchill's was not mere eloquence, it is a military fact. Hitler cannot win the war until he destroys Britain—and to destroy Britain he must invade and conquer the island of England. Today, that island is far better equipped to defend itself than when Churchill spoke. It is better equipped within itself, and it has acquired the aid of the United States. No serious military judgment thinks that England is likely again to be in as great a degree of peril as she was for a full year following the fall of France.

Churchill's statement of February 1941 was paralleled by another he made in April the same year. Again he foresaw the possibility of Hitler's entering Russia. And again he said Hitler could not win unless he conquered the island of England:

"The Germans may lay their hands for a time upon wheat lands of the Ukraine and oil fields of the Caucasus. They may dominate the Black Sea. They may dominate the Caspian. . . . In order to win this war, he [Hitler] must either conquer this island by invasion, or he must cut the ocean lifeline which joins us to the United States."

When Churchill said that, England's lifeline to the United States depended wholly on the British navy. Today it is protected also by the American navy; and by a constantly increasing British and American air power.

Prolongation Only

If things were much worse than they are, it is certain that Hitler could accomplish the worst that is feared in Russia, nothing that he can achieve there—so long as he does not conquer the island of England—means anything more gloomy than prolongation of the war.

By yet another look at the past, we may find assurance to relieve our present gloom. Hitler invaded Russia on June 22 last year. Go back to the newspapers of succeeding days, read what was then said about how long Russia would last. The impression conveyed by headlines, dispatches, and radio commentators was everywhere alike. It reflected the view held in Washington, so generally and by such well-informed persons as to be convincing. The view was that Hitler would, in a figure of speech common at the time, "go through Russia in six weeks like a knife through cheese."

Russia Will Have Oil

Russia's present status, in terms of ability to survive, is roughly this: By the total territory Hitler has taken since the beginning, Russia has lost a serious percentage of her basis for industrial capacity—coal, electricity, oil, railroads, factories. If Hitler succeeds in reaching the oil fields he is now approaching, Russia will lose an additional percentage. But there will remain still within Russia's territory, and very difficult for Hitler to reach, plenty of oil to enable Russia to keep her industrial machine going. Russia's farthest East supplies of oil are so located that it would take Hitler months to reach them.

At the very worst—a worst so bad that it is not seriously feared—Russia could keep going as China has kept going for five years. And the worst that could possibly happen in Russia would not conquer England.

Throughout the war, the thermometer of American psychology has registered a wide range of pessimism and optimism. In the extremes it has gone to, it has been wrong more often than right.

Britain Wins a Land Battle

From the New York Herald Tribune

As this country in its first summer of war gets used to sugar rationing and anticipates a beef shortage, there comes a heartening report on the food situation in Great Britain. Whereas before the war Great Britain produced a third of its food, it now produces two-thirds; it grows five potatoes for three grown before, five wheat grains for three before. It produced 10,000,000 more gallons of milk this year than in the best pre-war years. British farmers raised 5,500,000 tons of food, which formerly would have been imported, thereby saving shipping space needed for war supplies. Despite labor shortages, land under cultivation was increased by 2,000,000 acres in 1940, by 4,000,000 in 1941, by 6,000,000 in 1942. Much of this was waste land. Britain may boast that in one winter and spring—seven months—she drained and brought under the plough 150,000 acres of derelict land; Mussolini's proudest boast was of the 200,000 acres in the Pontine Marshes drained in the course of thirteen years.

These extraordinary results represent a truly national effort.

If Great Britain can do all this in her tight little isles, food shortages here with our comparatively limitless land resources will, once we have time to organize for war, be disgraceful.

But Justice Frankfurter evoked the curious doctrine that the First-La Guardia anti-injunction virtually repealed the Sherman act insofar as it applies to labor union and that Congress meant to let the one supersede the other. T is no justification for this in written records of the debate Congress and yet Justice Frankfurter undertook to say what thought congress meant by its action in banning injunction suit labor disputes.

The Hutcheson girl, more involved much more a dispute between an employer and employee organization, which is the meaning of "labor dispute." Yet supreme court turned a deaf to such pleas and virtually nullified the labor unions from protection no matter what they restrain trade or no matter they conspire to retard social progress.

Mr. Arnold has a tough ahead but he is determined to see it through.

Petrillo Case Is Tough for Arnold, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7. (AP)—One might wonder why the Department of Justice files merely a civil suit against James Petrillo and his musicians union for alleged restraint of trade when business men usually are indicted under the criminal provisions of the Sherman law.

Thurman Arnold, the assistant attorney general in charge of antitrust prosecutions, gave the writer the explanation today and it discloses the very interesting background on which the forthcoming suit is going to be fought.

Mr. Arnold says that wherever the law is uncertain or where the previous decision would indicate that the case might not be successfully prosecuted criminally he prefers a civil suit and that in this particular case, if there were a criminal procedure and the jury voted for acquittal, there would be no way to get the case up on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The assistant attorney general, it is announced, will handle the case himself and will attempt to secure a reversal of the judgment in the so-called "hod carriers' case," in which, oddly enough, no written opinion was filed by the supreme court.

Issue on Mixers

The issues in the hod carriers case turned on the use of automobile engines for mixing concrete while enroute whereas the union insisted that this was work that should be done by employees at the place of the construction job. In other words, the union demanded equal payment of wages for the number of men who would have been employed if the work had been done by union members.

Now the supreme court did file written opinion in the so-called Hutcheson case, but this turned largely on a fight between two unions is what is known as a jurisdictional dispute. Mr. Arnold feels he will have no difficulty in drawing a distinction between the "hod carriers" and the Hutcheson case.

It is to be noted however, that the written opinion in the Hutcheson matter was used by the supreme court as a basis for the order dismissing the "hod carriers' case." Mr. Petrillo doubtless believes he was acting lawfully in instructing his musicians not to help him canned music for broadcasting juke boxes unless pay was given just as if bands had been used.

"Reconstructed" Court Opinion

But, Mr. Arnold thinks, the attention of the courts can be focused on the difference in issues and the secure a reversal. It is interesting to observe that the opinion in the Hutcheson case was rendered by 5 to 2 vote. Justice Frankfurter wrote the opinion and he was supported by Justices Black, Reed and Douglas, while Justice Stone wrote a concurring opinion. The dissent was expressed by Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts. It happens that Justice Murphy (not participate in hearing the case and there were only eight justices on the bench at that time because Justice McReynolds had retired a the vacancy was not yet filled.

Since that time two new justices have joined the court, namely Justices Jackson and Byrnes, so it is not that we shall have what Justice Frankfurter has on one occasion referred to as a "reconstructed court sitting on the Petrillo case when it comes up from the lower courts."

The issues are by no means resolved, for the controversy over "made work" is an old and the custom exists in many unions. The theory that a union can prevent the use of mechanical inventions and that progress can be retarded and kept high by labor's power of economic bludgeoning is by no means new. It had been felt up to time the Hutcheson case was decided, however, that the Sherman anti-trust law could apply to restraints of trade if they acted operated to bestow monopolies to prevent the orderly process of commerce.

No Support Seen

But Justice Frankfurter evoked the curious doctrine that the First-La Guardia anti-injunction virtually repealed the Sherman act insofar as it applies to labor union and that Congress meant to let the one supersede the other. T is no justification for this in written records of the debate Congress and yet Justice Frankfurter undertook to say what thought congress meant by its action in banning injunction suit labor disputes.

The Hutcheson girl, more involved much more a dispute between an employer and employee organization, which is the meaning of "labor dispute." Yet supreme court turned a deaf to such pleas and virtually nullified the labor unions from protection no matter what they restrain trade or no matter they conspire to retard social progress.

Mr. Arnold has a tough ahead but he is determined to see it through.

Park Cannon May Be Used for Scrap

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (P)—President Roosevelt said today he thought it would be a good idea to collect old cannon and bronze statues from the nation's parks for melting into weapons of war.

The suggestion was made at a press conference at which he urged citizens to gather in scrap metal for the war effort.

The president smilingly told newsmen that he thought a great many parks probably would look better if the statues were converted into weapons and replaced after the war with something more artistic.

He only laughed when asked whether he had any specific statutory in mind.

Parents Often Help in Making Liar of Child

Word "Lie" Should Be Kept Out of Small Youngsters' Vocabulary

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.
Conscientious parents frequently, in their innocence, make liars out of their own children. When that youngster, say of five or six, comes to you with a great tale which you know cannot be possible, and you are shocked by the vividness with which he tells it, you may, in your serious mood, say to him, "That is a lie." You meant to tell him that it could not be possible. But it was possible in the child's imagination.

Should Avoid Word
As a matter of fact, it is a good thing to keep the word "lie" out of a small child's vocabulary until he is seven or eight. If, in his innocence, he tells us something that really happened in his fancy and we dub that a lie, he begins to think of a lie as a part of his true experience. So far as he is concerned, we then make a lie out of something that had been true.

The trouble with us older people is that we are so far away from childhood that we cannot see things as children see them, nor understand them in terms of their understanding. The best rule for us is to ask ourselves: "What does this mean to the child? What is his motive back of it?" A lie is only a lie when it is intended to be a misrepresentation. Now the small child does not aim to misrepresent. He usually speaks from the fullness of his own experience.

My special bulletin, "Honesty and Truthfulness in Children," may be had by writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York city, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problems
Q. What good inexpensive foods can families get from grist mills?

A. Whole grain flour which is the best sort of cereal and the least expensive. Many farmers can have their own grain made into the very best of cereals there.

Q. Are there good chances for self-improvement for an earnest young man entering the army navy or air forces?

A. There are tremendous opportunities open to the earnest youth who has resolve and self-discipline. He can grow every day in the skills and knowledge of his particular job. Also he can enter free correspondence courses. Those who will travel far and wide can constantly collect facts and ideas from various parts of the world.

Puerto Rico Feels the Pinch at Last

CROWDS BATTLE daily in San Juan for places on the few buses that still operate.

By JOHN P. McKNIGHT
Wide World Features

San Juan, P. R.—Puerto Rico is beginning to feel the pinch of war at last. Strategic outpost of America's defenses though it is, the island for many months rocked along much as in peacetime. Signs of the change are:

1. Food prices, despite all efforts at control, are skyrocketing. In mid-May, the average stood at 70 per cent above that of July, 1939, unimported foods had more than doubled in price.

2. Many foods are no longer, or only occasionally, to be had. Housewives often find it difficult to buy meat, eggs, potatoes, milk, beer, soft drinks, cigarettes and canned goods.

3. For 10 days there was no gasoline for the public and transportation companies were restricted.

Arrival of a consignment eased the situation so that motorists now get four gallons weekly. For lack of spare parts, many public omnibuses are laid up. Result: Public cars pack passengers in like sardines, police are needed at main stops to keep crowds in order.

4. The housing problem grows critical, as more residential buildings are taken over for the armed forces.

5. Electric power is being curtailed. Thirty-two towns and villages now have no power during most of the daylight hours.

6. Unemployment, Governor Rexford Tugwell has warned, looms with the decrease in army and navy material for civil projects.

One thing, there will be plenty of rum. Boats are lacking to ship it to the states, and warehouses are full.

Husband Blames Himself as Wife Seeks "Good Time"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage—Distributed by Kings Features Syndicate, Inc.

The story of the philandering husband went into reverse today, when a woman wrote to me that she had philandered, and that her husband not only forgave, but was "so sweet" to her she can never do anything wrong again.

"When I read in your column the other day about a woman who had been happily married for years and whose husband had stepped out on her a few times while he was away from home, it prompted this letter to you," she writes.

Wanted Good Time

"Please tell her to forget all about it. I had the same experience in our home, but it was I who did the stepping out. He was away, working nights, and I got lonesome and wanted to have a good time. I did, and finally my husband found out about it. He did exactly the opposite from anything I had expected," says the wife.

"Instead of leaving me or getting mad, he blamed himself. Since then he has taken me out in the afternoons, bought me flowers and candy. When he couldn't go with me, he has planned for someone else to take care of our two-year-old son. In fact, he has been so sweet to me that I could never think of doing anything wrong.

"He suggests things that keep me so busy during the day that often I have to do my housework at night, after he has gone. He knows I love dancing, so he has started taking dancing lessons.

Little Things Count

"Please tell this woman that she should try to treat her husband as my husband treated me. Maybe her husband strayed because she didn't give him the attention she should have given him. In marriage it isn't the big things that count, like being a perfect housekeeper and a good cook. More important, is whether a man wants to go out and have a good time, and whether his wife is willing to go with him.

"It's fatal always to say 'No' or complain that she's tired after a day's work. She should learn how to say 'Yes,' and the little outing to a dance or a movie will relax them both. She'll soon forget how tired she is.

"Please tell this lady who wrote you how well tolerance and forgiveness worked in our family. We are both much happier now than we were when we first married, three years ago," the letter concludes.

Sweetheart Not Eligible

Dear Miss Fairfax:
My sweetheart is in the Army, and told me he would make out his insurance to me if I would wait for him. I'd like to know if I can collect. If not, I think I ought to advise him of that fact. He has a mother and sister, but hasn't seen them for a long time. I intend to wait for him, anyway.
J. W. R.

Men in service must make out their insurance policies to a wife, blood kin or someone who has acted as their guardian. You could not qualify in that capacity.

Dear Miss Fairfax:
Please tell me something about the V-Mail Service. I would like to send my sweetheart one of those letters.

Answer: Egg white is a valuable protein and is not harmful to anyone unless they have an allergy to it. It is true that raw egg white is hard to digest but cooked egg white is not. There is no truth in the idea that it destroys the flora.

VICTORY CROPS: 4-H Provides for Men and Motors

Food that fills man-sized baskets is raised by many a youngster.

Rubber scrap heaps pile high when 4-H Club members salvage for Uncle Sam.

By HOWARD A. MORGEN
Wide World Features

St. Paul, Minn. — An army of hundreds of thousands of "teen-aged youngsters" is on the march in rural America today, shouldering rakes, shovels and their weapons of attack. On the defense front they are active in rounding up scrap rubber and any other waste materials that will help to win the war.

The front line soldiers of this war are the boys and girls in 4-H, the national club organization which seeks to improve the "head, heart, hands and health" of its members. They have pledged themselves this year to the task of "feeding the farm family for health, peace and victory" through a country-wide victory garden program. Four-H has developed greatly since its inception several decades ago. Then there was little more than the three R's in the rural school, no project work in the home, no exhibits by rural youngsters in the county and state fairs, and very little organization in the community.

Today 4-H has spread to every state in the union, with more than 1,600,000 members who plan and carry out their own programs.

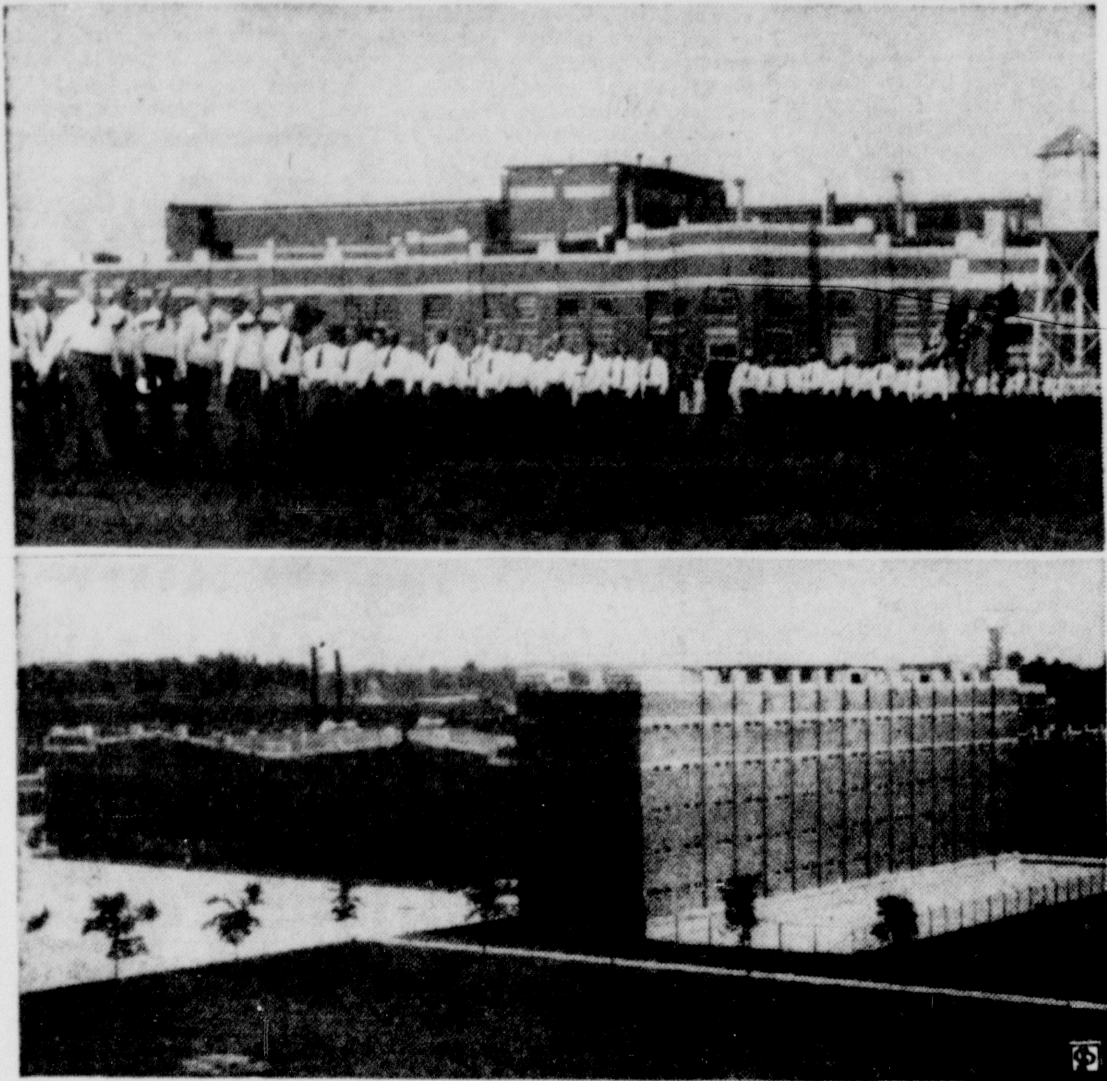

In its early years, 4-H was regarded by the average farmer only as an organization which encouraged farm youngsters to raise a few crops, or a pig or a steer, and thus earn a little extra money for themselves.

This year, however, it has definitely "come of age," and thousands of farm families are being supplied with their entire vegetable requirements through the 4-H victory gardens.

Typical of this national food-raising effort is the accomplishment of Minnesota 4-H clubs, with a membership of more than 47,000. When the farm garden program was suggested by national 4-H leaders, it was adopted as one of the prime projects for the year by the 2,047 clubs in Minnesota, and today vegetables for more than 15,000 families are being produced on plots tended by club members.

MICHIGAN PRISONERS SET OUT TO PROVE THAT CONVICTS ALSO PLAY ROLE IN U. S. WAR EFFORT

Convicts parade, top, at Jackson, Mich., state prison, below

By ESTHER VAN WAGONER TUFFY
Central Press Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7—American convicts are patriotic, too.

Not because prison conditions are of the luxury-hotel variety compared with those in Germany, Japan and Italy, but because there exists, even for the man behind bars, a simple appreciation of the kind of country that is his.

What is happening out in Jackson, Mich., at the State Prison of Southern Michigan is typical, says James V. Bennett, director of the bureau of prisons, department of justice.

The "str-tistics" set the population of the Jackson prison at 5,452. The sale of War Stamps and Bonds goes on at the brick pace of $2,500 a month. The total is approaching $30,000 without all of the June figures yet completed. A recent drive for pledges—monthly deductions—resulted in several hundred new customers. The average pledge is $2 each, representing considerably more than the optimum "10 per cent" set by the treasury department.

Want To Fight

As one inmate, who sacrificed his cigarette and candy bar money, said, "H—, I only wish I could get out of here and fight as well as just buy stamps."

That explains the parades. Denied the privilege and honor of serving in the armed services of their country, they have a war-born desire to march. And march they do at Jackson, Mich.

The inmate—veterans of World War No. 1—68 in all—drill frequently in the prison yard. On Memorial day the veterans and ex-service men from Ten block, Sixteen block and the Farms formed their ranks at the South gate. Close to 300 men from the "trustly" blocks fell in line behind them. Led by a band and color guard, they marched snappily to the prison cemetery for a ceremony without precedent.

No gold-brained uniforms could they wear. Just overseas caps, dark trousers, white shirts and plain black ties.

Veteran Lieut. George Parrish is proud of his men, who throw back their shoulders, pull in their stomachs and recapture some of their old military bearing. Says he, "A soldier never forgets his manual of drills."

The "Jackson army," under command of Lieutenant Parrish, is calling for volunteers. Capt. John Doe is helping with the formation of a company expected to enroll 240 men.

Hold Drills

Drill sessions are held three evenings a week in a vacant spot behind the supply houses. That leaves the yard for the regular recreational program.

The drills will serve two purposes. Old timers will become familiar with new drill regulations. New volunteers, who hope to be inducted after their parole, will receive an excellent foundation.

Some of the Jackson prisoners who don't drill or buy War Bonds and Stamps, express their patriotism by responding to the "Adopt a Soldier" campaign.

The men who contributed their quarters to this special fund had to sacrifice some little item or their own commissary order so they could contribute to these gift boxes. When the boxes arrive, perhaps they will mean a little more, coming as they do from men to whom 25 cents represents three days wages.

Every week at Jackson is posted a wartime notice. A recent one read, "The blood donor list this week will include numbers 44,839 to 52,000 inclusive—signed, Medical Director." So they give their blood.

The World War No. 1 veterans at Jackson talk of little else but the "Kentucky plan." That's the plan to permit prisoners induction into the armed services.

The mounting cry from American prisoners that they have not been allotted full opportunity to contribute their maximum to the war effort aroused Dr. Garrett Heyns, Michigan director of corrections, to do some investigating. He talked with war department and Kentucky prison officials.

Can Enter Army

He discovered that "the Army has no objections to receiving a man with a record." What they do object to is "releasing men purely for the express purpose of going into the Army."

Behind this is the belief that a man should be paroled as a good future citizen. Then as a reward for becoming a good potential citizen, he has the right to take part in the defense of his country.

Some Jackson prisoners point with significant pride to the fine war records of the English prisoners who were allowed to volunteer in the British forces. Out of 7,000, 20 were mentioned in dispatches, 25 received the DCM, eight were given commissions, and three received the Victoria Cross.

England, too, was reluctant to utilize prisoners at the front, but their performance inspired military authorities to draft prisoners along with private citizens.

The way the men behind bars feel about the war breaks forth in the humor columns of their publications. From the "Bighouse Banner" published by a group of inmates at the state house of correction and branch prison at Marquette, Mich., comes this gem:

When Hitler becomes the king of the world,
When Musso wears Churchill's crown,
When the Japs dictate the terms of peace
In this nation's capital town,
When loyal French kiss the feet of Laval,
When a golf ball sprouts blue fuzz,
When all this happens, we'll admit defeat—
But not, by gawd, 'till it does!

The Australian government has increased the production of charcoal for gas producer units on motor vehicles to 40 tons weekly and is arranging to have supplies available in every town in the Commonwealth.

SWELLING CAUSED BY CANE BORER

BLACKOUT FOR CANE-BORER INJURY

Cane-borers, considered one of the most serious insect pests of the raspberry, also attack blackberry and dewberry plants.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, the larvae of the cane-borer frequently causes swellings of the canes. As a result, the cane dies or breaks off at the point where the swelling occurs.

To control these borers, cut out any infested canes, also any tops which seem to be withering and drooping. Make the cut somewhat below the point at which the injury occurs and burn thoroughly for the eggs or larvae of the borer will be in this section of the cane.

Mark's Wife

by MARIE BLIZARD

SYNOPSIS
BARBARA WISTER, former actress, finds herself a widow at 27, when her husband, MARK, a newspaperman-turned-author, dies in South Wintbridge, the small town in which they had taken up residence. The evening after the funeral, she is visited by young DR. TONY BRADSHAW, young physician of the town.

CHAPTER TWO
"TOT!" TONY hid his eyes, making a great business of lighting his pipe after Barbara said that, because it was true, the town did call the Wisters "queer."
"They were right, my dear," Barbara continued, "and they resent us and I don't blame them. They weren't prepared for us and we— we didn't try to fit into the picture as we should have. South Wintbridge is . . . well, I don't have to tell you. It's the perfect New England town. Conservative, tidy, well-ordered. I can see why and how they think of . . . of the Wisters."

"Why should you?" he said anxiously.
"Because I want to," she answered simply. "You see, I'd like to belong, be one of them instead of what they think I am."

The voice inside of him protested silently. He would not have Barbara Wister any different than she was. Vital, warm-hearted, impulsive, all these things he had seen in her the first time that he had come across the Wisters one day at the lake a year before.
"I can look back to when we first came," she was saying, "and what a shock we must have been! All of us brown as gypsies. Mark, thin, dark and so odd to look at, with his thatch of black hair and his skinny legs under white shorts. The man from Mars, he used to call himself. And I, a woman in faded slacks and a brilliant naked baby cradled in books in the back of our station wagon."

The old perplexity came back to him as it always did when he thought of Barbara and Mark Wister as he saw them together and he had seen them often, been their only friend in South Wintbridge. He was familiar with Wister, yet he never knew him; he would never know what had drawn them to each other.

Barbara, he saw, had forgotten him. Her voice had a faraway quality.
"Mark had pneumonia the winter Sonny was born and the doctor said he'd have to get away from the city. We couldn't afford a trailer so we bought a station wagon and a tent and went to Florida. Then in the summer we came here."

"Why did you choose this place?"
"We closed our eyes and put a finger on a map of New England, opened our eyes and saw that it was South Wintbridge. When Mark found out that there was no artist's colony, no writers here, he decided that this was the place. Mark hated colonies, groups, hated patterns, being a part of a thing, or identifying himself with a group. . . . We thought we were only going to stay that one summer, but when we came back the next year and Mark had sold his book, we bought the house and now . . ."

They both knew what NOW meant.
"Now you'll go back to the city?" The forlorn note escaped him, but when he looked at her from under his lashes, he saw that she had not been aware of it.

She was shaking her head, saying, "I haven't anything to go back to, Tony."

"But your home? The place you came from?"

Again she shook her head. "I never had a home, my dear. My mother died when I was five and my father, who was a foreign correspondent, dragged me around the world with him. I lived in boarding schools and hotels until he died when I was 19. Even then, I always knew what I wanted. Once, when I was 14, I spent a summer in a little place like this. I lived with a big family of brothers and sisters and even a grandmother and grandfather. I pretended I was one of them. I cried when I had to go back to school. I never cried when I had to leave any other place. It was the first place where I felt . . . where I wasn't lonely. Do you understand?"

Tony Bradshaw was 28, but now he felt something queer in his throat. He nodded. After a moment, he grumbled, "What did you do after your father died?"

"I had to go to work. Dad didn't leave a nickel. I haven't much education, Tony, and I didn't, and still don't know how to do anything useful. . . . One of Dad's friends was a theatrical producer and he gave me a small walk-on part. After that I got other small parts. I never was any good, never wanted to be. I hate the tinsel part of the theater. You have to love it to see its glamorous side and I never loved it."

He cleared his throat, being again without the right words, and ventured, "But it is a way to earn a living."

"Yes," she murmured, her eyes slipping away from him into the past, seeing the years when she'd lived in shabby theatrical boarding houses, remembering the ever-present fear of running out of her meager funds. "Then I met Mark, she said.

And now she wondered what Mark had seen in her that he should have said that night three weeks after their meeting. "Don't worry about your show closing. We're going to get married."

"Did you know him long?" Tony asked.
"Not very long," she said aloud, and to herself. "And never very well." She had never known him because she never knew what went on in his mind, so different from her own. He never talked to her about the things that he was thinking, or writing. It seemed impossible to her now that they could have lived so intimately, yet be worlds apart.

She forgot the doctor sitting

Salad Deluxe Good For Any Meal

Perhaps you think you haven't time to prepare a salad; maybe the family is crying, "Let's eat," but this orange ambrosia salad, once served, will be the piece de resistance of any meal; delayed or otherwise.

Ingredients: Medium-size oranges, lettuce, honey, shredded coconut.

Directions: Peel the oranges and slice crosswise, allowing four or five slices (one-fourth inch) for each salad. Arrange lettuce on salad plates. Have warm honey and coconut in separate dishes. Dip orange slices in honey and then in coconut. Arrange on lettuce leaves. Serve cold.

Lemon Halves Useful

Save lemon halves — they make attractive containers for salads, gelatin mixtures, fruit and frozen desserts. After juice has been removed from lemon halves, carefully scoop out pulp with a spoon. Wash well, dry and put the lemon cups in covered jar in the refrigerator. They will remain fresh three or four days.

How To Cook Sausage

When cooking pork sausage links, place in a fry pan and do not prick the links. Add a small amount of water, cover, and steam five minutes. Cook over low heat, turning sausage until brown and thoroughly cooked.

Tea Off!

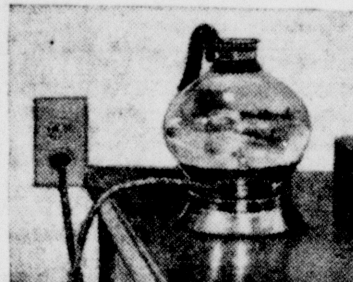

By DOROTHY ROE
Wide World Features Writer

Be careful, my dear deluded housewife, how you splash that tea around. The war has now reached into your teapot, reduced its contents 50 per cent. Whole-salers are allowed just half as much tea as they sold in 1941, and civilian consumption must be cut in accordance.

So maybe it would be a good idea to learn how to conserve tea, as your Uncle Sam asks you to do. Here are the basic rules of correct tea brewing, as announced by the Tea Bureau:

MEASURE CAREFULLY
One level teaspoon of tea makes one cup of brew.

DON'T GUESS. Use exactly one cup of water for each teaspoonful of tea.

BE SURE water is really boiling, to bring out the full flavor of the tea.

BREW 5 MINUTES before pouring. For weaker brew, 3 minutes is sufficient.

FOLLOW THESE RULES and you'll get 200 cups from every pound of tea.

Specialist Gives Advice on How To Can Peaches

Miss McPheeters Explains How To Make Sugar Go Further

Some tips on ways to make your limited sugar allotment go as far as possible in canning peaches are given by Miss Margaret McPheeters, Maryland Extension Service. They are endorsed by home economists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Slicing peaches to can is recommended over halving because it allows for extracting more juice for canning and also for getting more fruit in each jar, which is important in view of the shortage of containers and rubber for canning.

Best Method
Slice the raw peaches, heat them, then pack them hot in their own juice, and process. Put sugar directly on the peaches before you heat them; by doing this you help draw out the juice and waste no sweetening. Let the fruit stand this way for a few moments to start the juice flowing. Then, put the kettle on the stove and heat the peaches slowly until the sugar has dissolved and the fruit is hot throughout.

Put the fruit with its juice in jars, and process them in a water-bath canner.

In Halves
If you want your peaches canned in halves, make a sirup to pour over the peaches in the jars. Process in the same manner as sliced peaches canned in their own juice. Use the proportion of five cups of sugar to a gallon of water. This makes a light sirup, in accordance with your sugar ration.

You can use honey or corn sirup as a substitute for part of this sugar. Use equal parts of honey and sugar, or two-thirds of the five-cup proportion in sugar and one-third in corn sirup.

APPLES AND HONEY A TASTY TIDBIT

For something different that has a very definite lift to it, try apple slices fried with honey. It is a tasty tidbit which calls for more than one return engagement.

Ingredients: Eight apples; one-half teaspoon salt; two tablespoons honey; three tablespoons bacon drippings; two tablespoons water.

Directions: Cut washed apples into quarters, remove stem, blossom end and seeds. Cut into medium thin slices. When grease is hot in skillet add apples, salt and honey mixed with water. Cook over high heat for five minutes, then reduce heat for about twenty-five minutes longer.

For a variation on this recipe you might slice the apples as you slice a pineapple (whole slices with core removed) and saute until nearly tender. Add one teaspoonful honey to each serving. Good with ham, meat loaf or sausage.

Square Meal Salads

TREASURE-BASKET SALAD from your Victory Garden

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
Wide World Food Editor

A salad can, and should be, much more than a mere accessory to a meal. The best salads not only offer eye and appetite appeal but also measure up to the national nutritional yardstick by providing a full quota of the most important minerals and vitamins.

Go to your Victory garden or to the market shelves for the freshest vegetables for this BRUNSWICK SALAD. To serve four or five, mix together one cup each cooked lima beans, peas, diced celery, two hard-cooked eggs, sliced, one tablespoon each chopped parsley, onions and green pepper. Add one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika and one-third cup French dressing. Chill several hours in a covered bowl. Drain and mix in one peeled tomato cut in inch pieces. Roughly pile onto crisp (well chilled) lettuce placed on a platter or in bowl. Top with three tablespoons salad dressing or mayonnaise with one tablespoon chili sauce added. Serve with hot or cold bread. For dessert have fresh fruit berries or melon.

Full of zip and fruit is AMBROSIA MOLD. Try it when the thermometer rockets. Dissolve a package of lemon gelatin in one cup boiling pineapple juice. Cool and let thicken a little. Add two-third cup gingerale, one half cup each diced pineapple, peaches and seeded white or black cherries. Pour into mold and chill until firm. Unmold on shredded lettuce and cover with salad dressing or mayonnaise. Sprinkle with one half cup sautéed peanuts or any other kind of nuts that suit your fancy.

Meat goes into SALAD LA VERNE. Diced cooked ham is grand but other meats will do. To serve four mix together one cup diced cooked meat, one-half cup grated carrots, two tablespoons chopped onions, one-third teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon each paprika and celery seed and one-third cup salad dressing. Chill and serve in a bowl lined with any chilled salad green.

Abraham's Intercessory Prayer

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Aug. 9 is Genesis 18, the Golden Text being James 5:16. "The supplication of a righteous man availeth much."

ONE DAY, Abraham was sitting in front of his tent enjoying what shade he could get there from the shadow of the tent as the day was hot. Coming toward him were three men, and Abraham must have recognized that they were no ordinary visitors. It is customary in the Orient for a man to greet visitors by first falling to his knees in front of them, then touching his forehead to the ground. Abraham did this, and also hastened into the tent, told his wife, Sarah, to take three measures of fine meal and make cakes of them.

You notice we spell his name Abraham now, while last week we spelled it Abram. God had entered into a covenant with him and told him that his name should no more be called Abram, but Abraham.

Abraham also ran to his herd and caught a calf and gave it to a young man to have it killed and dressed for a feast. He took butter (curdled milk) and milk, and when the feast was ready he served it to the three men under an oak tree, "and they did eat." One of these men was the Lord, for the account speaks of "them," or "the men," and sometimes "the Lord said." On this occasion "they said" to Abraham, "Where is Sarah, thy wife?" Abraham said she was in the tent. Then He (the Lord) said He would return again and that Sarah should have a son. Sarah was listening inside the tent, and she could not help laughing inside herself to think that she, an old woman, could have a son.

Nothing Too Hard for God
"Why does she laugh?" the Lord asked Abraham. "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" At this Sarah denied that she had laughed. She did not have the courage to acknowledge her fault, for it was a lack of faith that had made her laugh, and when she was found out, she was afraid.

The three men then rose and started toward the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, and Abraham went with them for a way. And the Lord said, Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do, seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?

earth shall be blessed in him?"

Then the Lord told Abraham that he was planning to destroy those cities because they were so very wicked. Now Lot, Abraham's nephew whom he loved, lived in Sodom, and Abraham said, "Wilt Thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked? Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt Thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous therein? That be far from Thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked; and that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from Thee: Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?"

The Lord answered that if he found fifty within the city that were righteous He would not destroy it. Emboldened by his success, Abraham suggested that there might not be fifty, but forty-five. Then, said Abraham, "Peradventure there shall be forty there. And He said, I will not do it for forty's sake."

Pleads for Thirty
"Oh, let not the Lord be angry," said Abraham, "and I will speak: Peradventure there shall be thirty found there. And He said, I will not do it if I find thirty there." Abraham next suggested that there might be twenty good men in the city, and got the Lord's promise that it would not be destroyed if there were that many. And finally he asked the Lord not to be angry, but if there were only ten good, would He spare it for their sake? and the Lord gave His promise.

And the Lord went His way, as soon as He had left communing with Abraham, and Abraham returned unto his place. We know, of course, that God would not have destroyed the cities, even if Abraham had not interceded, and that He led Abraham on to plead with Him, showing the Lord how good and courageous was this man. Eventually, when the cities were destroyed, four people were saved: Lot, whom Abraham loved, his wife and two daughters. Who knows what we may do for our loved ones by interceding for them as Abraham pleaded for those who might be righteous in the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, especially his beloved nephew?

And finally, the lesson teaches us hospitality. How do we know what those whom we entertain in our homes are? May they not prove to us, "angels unawares?"

MAKE FIRST APPEARANCE IN NEW UNIFORMS

MT. SAVAGE, Aug. 7.—Members of Mt. Savage's Girl Scout troop and Brownie unit made their first public appearance in the organization's official uniforms last evening in the Firemen's anniversary parade.

The troop, consisting of thirty-six members, and the Brownies with an enrollment of thirty, received their uniforms at the regular meeting Tuesday evening.

Funds to purchase the official uniforms were raised by a series of benefit parties and socials held in the community. The final payments were realized from the proceeds of a novel carnival held in the community last week. The troop netted $138 from the affair and completed payment for the new uniforms.

The organization was formed last September and is sponsored by a community committee, consisting of persons from various organizations and churches. During the brief history of the troop all of its members have completed first aid courses and many of the older members will begin an advance course in the near future.

Firemen's Parade
Is Largest Held
In Mt. Savage

Ten Visiting Fire Companies and Three Auxiliaries Participate

MT. SAVAGE, Aug. 7.—The parade held here last night in connection with the carnival of the Mt. Savage Volunteer Fire Company was one of the largest and most colorful affairs ever held in the community. Ten volunteer fire companies in full uniform participated and three of these companies had ladies auxiliaries also in the parade.

Float Is Highlight

The highlight of the parade was a patriotic float sponsored by the local chapter of the Daughters of America. On the float one of the members was dressed as Uncle Sam and another depicted the statue of Liberty and grouped about them were three members dressed in white, representing faith, hope and charity. The remaining members of the organization marched in back of the float and were dressed in red, white and blue; each carried a small American flag.

The Mt. Savage Coon Hunter's club sponsored the most original float in the parade. Small trees and sod were transplanted in the float and in one of the trees a coon was chained near the top. Two hunters stood near the tree holding two large hunting dogs. During the parade the animals continuously tried to break loose and claim their prey.

The Mt. Savage Girl Scouts and Brownies marched in full uniform for the first time last night, led by Mrs. Gilbert Haus, Scoutleader. Following the troops the committee members of the Scouts rode in floats.

The Grafton Volunteer Fire Company was the group which came the greatest distance to participate in the affair and they brought with them the company's new emergency ambulance.

Oakland and Tri-Town bands furnished music for the marching.

Other Companies in Line

Others participating in the parade were American Legion Post, 52, Midland Fire Company and Auxiliary, Grantsville Fire Company, Oakland Fire Company, Bloomington Fire Company and Auxiliary, Woodmen of the World, Corriganville Fire Company and Auxiliary and Meyersdale Fire Company.

The Mt. Savage Volunteer Fire Company concluded the parade and demonstrated several intricate drills under the direction of Herbert Stephens.

The crowd was kept in order by Mt. Savage Boy Scouts who patrolled the streets during the affair. After the parade a dance was held in Mullany's hall.

The Firemen's celebration will conclude tomorrow (Saturday) evening.

Frostburg Jaycees Plan Program
To Encourage Writing Service Men

Will Place Mail Counters
in Business Places;
To Draw Names

FROSTBURG, Aug. 7.—The Frostburg Junior Chamber of Commerce is planning to establish a number of mailing service stations in Frostburg, the purpose being to start a campaign to have citizens write and send gifts to men and women from Frostburg and vicinity serving with the armed services of the United States.

Names Will Be Drawn

The names of men in the service from the community will be drawn by lot and for one week the selected names will be posted on the bulletin and citizens will be invited to write letters or cards and buy gifts for the men whose names are posted.

At the end of the seven day period, all mail and packages accumulated in the box will be bundled up with local newspapers and sent to the latest address of the servicemen selected.

The plan was proposed at a meeting of the Junior Chamber held Wednesday evening. Charles Bruner, president of the Oakland Junior Chamber, who attended the meeting, stated that the plan was being used in Oakland, where mail is sent to two servicemen weekly.

With a view of establishing the community mailing service by August 26, President Charles N. Hill appointed J. Edgar MacMannis, Dr. Leo Minkoff and Ralph M. Race to investigate Oakland's set-up and make plans for establishing the service here.

Will Aid at Picnic

The Frostburg Jaycees also voted to participate in Frostburg Civilian Defense picnic to be held Labor day. Arthur Roe was appointed to assign members on shifts throughout the day, taking care of a booth or other concession.

Announcement was made that the Jaycees would hold a stag dinner September 16, at 6:30 p. m., at Gunter hotel.

Robert Kenney, former secretary of the local chamber and now employed at Middletown, Pa., was a visitor.

Revercomb Takes Slight Lead in
W. Va. Primary

Heads Funkhouser by 302
Votes; Shepherdstown
Man Asks Recount

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 7.—Chapman Revercomb took over the lead for the first time today in the changing primary battle with Raymond J. Funkhouser for the right to represent the Republican party against Governor M. M. Neely in the United States senator race next November.

Revercomb, the organization backed Charleston attorney, forced into a lead of 302 votes after trailing for three days in the unofficial tabulations.

The reversal came on the strength of corrected figures in Wayne and Fayette counties, and Funkhouser almost immediately asked for recounts in each county.

Based upon both official and unofficial tabulations of Tuesday's vote in the closest primary battle which has turned up in West Virginia since 1936 the vote stood tonight:

47,798 for Revercomb; 47,496 for Funkhouser.

Funkhouser, Shepherdstown business man who came unheralded into the political picture, received his first setback today when Wayne county corrected its unofficial tabulation.

This trimmed his advantage from 521 to 201 votes and later official canvass in Fayette switched the lead altogether on the strength of a net loss to Funkhouser of 426 votes in that county.

According to hospital attaches the child was playing with several other children and was struck when they ran into the street. Paul J. and I will be there to help my constituents in any way possible."

Mrs. Byron's withdrawal left E. Brooke Lee of Silver Spring the only candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Sixth district.

Thus, what had been a four-way fight subsided to a one-man run-away.

There were four candidates in the field for the nomination several weeks ago. Mrs. Byron, Lee, John J. McMullen of Cumberland, erstwhile political ally of Mrs. Byron, and Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson of Chevy Chase.

But only Lee and Mrs. Byron filed certificates of candidacy before the deadline two weeks ago. McMullen and Mrs. Nicholson both have announced their support of Lee.

Their support was taken by political leaders as indicative of strong organization backing for Lee in Western Maryland.

Mrs. Byron's announcement today came only two days after she had opened her campaign for renomination and reelection with a declaration that "I'm in a fight and I'm in it to the finish."

In a speech at Williamsport Wednesday she said that first she intended only to fill out the unexpired term of her late husband. The war, she continued, led to her decision to seek reelection.

Lee doesn't have to fight for the Democratic nomination in the primaries Sept. 8 but he will have a fight on his hands at the general elections in November.

J. Glenn Beall of Cumberland and Harry C. Trisler both have filed for the Republican nomination for representative to Congress.

NEW YORK—How would you like to be judge in a bathing beauty contest?

Oh, you would, would you? Since when have you had too many friends?

For myself, I have had enough of it. I am now a former judge of bathing beauty contests.

TWO MEN AND A GIRL

When a girl like Lynn Bari is pursued by two swains like Henry Fonda and Don Ameche, you'd hardly expect to find such harmony; but here it is! The three are co-starring in Twentieth Century-Fox's new comedy hit, "The Magnificent Dope," will delight moviegoers at the Strand theater starting today. Edward Everett Horton and George Barbier head the supporting cast in this amusing tale of a country lad who runs afoul of some city slickers.

Galaxy of Dancing Girls in Musical Show

Abbott and Costello in their brief but spectacular career have portrayed detectives, cowboys, sailors, soldiers, mechanics, and carnival spicers.

In their newest Universal comedy "Pardon My Sarong" now showing at the Liberty theater, they will appear as bus drivers who later become castaways on an uncharted south sea island.

According to advance announcements, the new vehicle takes the famous comedians halfway around the globe in a combination chase, treasure hunt and encounter with a tribe of south seas dancing beauties.

Virginia Bruce has the leading feminine role and the very imposing cast includes Robert Paige and Lief Erikson. Other notables in the line-up are Lionel Atwill, Nan Wynn and Samuel S. Hinds.

Entertaining novelties are promised by the appearance of Tip, Tap and Toe, dancers, the Saronga Dancing Girls and The Four Ink Spots of radio, stage and juke-box fame.

Many new numbers are listed in the musical score which was supervised by Charles Previn. Selections include "Island of the Moon," "Lovely Luana," "Vingo Jingo," "Do I Worry," "Java Jive" and "Shout, Brother, Shout." The last three numbers are presented by The Four Ink Spots.

"Ukulele Ike" Isn't Worried about Future!

Cliff Edwards, who popularized the Hawaiian ukulele in America, isn't worried about his future! Currently playing a comic role in the Columbia western, "Riders of the Badlands" at the Garden theater, Edwards wouldn't care if he lost his movie job tomorrow.

For, after having had a long and successful career on the stage, he figures that he can always go back to the theater. And if even that fails him, Cliff, who has sold more original songs than any other entertainer in the world, can always pick up his "uke" and sell some more records.

"Ghost Town Law" is Unusual Western

Ending its engagement at the Embassy theater today, "Ghost Town Law" Monogram's fifth in the "Rough Riders" series, with Buck Jones, Tim McCoy and Raymond Hatton, is packed full of action and suspense.

Jess Bowers wrote the unusual screenplay that concerns the strange doings of some elusive "ghost" outlaws in a deserted mining town.

Closely knit, the story develops through a series of mysterious happenings and strange disappearances to an amazing and shocking climax.

Glamour Comes To Marjorie Main

Glamour comes at last to plain Marjorie Main, after more than 100 character roles on the screen.

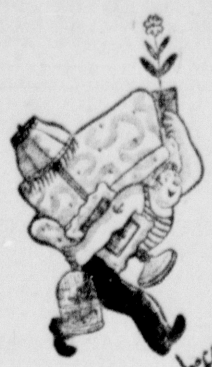

Miss Main, who wows and this time wins Wallace Beery in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Jackass Mail," now showing at the Maryland theater, dons the fanciest of pink satin dancing costumes, decorated with multi-colored sequins and flounced with a half dozen ruffled petticoats, in the picture.

As belle of the Golden West hotel, Miss Main flaunts a headpiece of pink feathers and carries a black lace fan.

Another outfit consists of a jet black beaded affair which was very popular with saloon singing sou-brettes of the year 1850.

"All this glamour was a bit out of my line," commented the raspy-voiced actress, "but it was fun to get my man for a change."

Lynn had no dancing experience, but she did stand five feet six inches in her stocking feet, and was selected.

This was the start of more than five years as studio chorine and bit player, which culminated, after several recent important parts, in her first major starring role in "The Magnificent Dope," the new Twentieth Century-Fox comedy hit opening at the Strand theater today. She still has that little want ad—carries it in her purse for luck. Henry Fonda and Don Ameche

Weatherite Captures Feature at Fairgo

Wagering Shows $33,517 Increase Over Last Year

Daily Double Pays $113.50—"Victory Day" To Be Observed Today

Coming up fast in the stretch, Mrs. G. O. Russell's Weatherite, piloted by E. Smith, defeated the favored Try Flying in the feature race of yesterday's Elks' day program at Fairgo, the B. P. O. Elks purse. Royal Echo was third.

Lester Deneen, exalted ruler of Cumberland Lodge No. 63, B. P. O. Elks, presented a trophy to Weatherite's trainer, E. Yowell. Try Flying took an early lead with Cake Gravy, Roving Eye and Royal Echo bunched close behind. Coming into the final turn, Try Flying was still in front with Weatherite third behind Royal Echo. In the stretch, Weatherite moved up to win going away.

Weatherite, which paid $15.35, was the first winner of the meeting for both Smith and Trainer Yowell. Try Flying, 3 to 5 in the betting, returned $2.80 and $2.40 and Royal Echo paid $2.80.

The current meeting, four days old, has seen a total of $461,713 pass through the mutual windows, an increase of $33,517 over last year's mark for the first four days. Yesterday's handle of $122,505 was slightly smaller than Thursday's but was $10,593 ahead of the 1941 figure for the fourth day. The crowd also was under that of Thursday, approximately 5,000 turning out.

Daily Double Pays $113.50

Pans who coupled Lost and Found in the first with Teco Tack in the second collected daily double payoffs of $113.50, the largest of the current meeting. Only two favorites, Teco Tack in the second and My One in the fourth, registered victories.

Jockey "Buddy" Root, who had one win, one second and a third, increased his total number of points to fifty. J. Harrell is second with thirty-one markers. W. Balzaretto is third with twenty-eight. W. Dufford is fourth with twenty-five and A. Anderson is fifth with twenty. For the first time this year, there were no double winners.

Claude Feltner, who saddled Scotie in the third, went out in front in the race for the gold watch, to be awarded to the leading winning trainer. K. D. Kolsh and D. Chamblin, each with three winners, are tied for second.

"Victory day," honoring Cumberland district men in the service of their country, will be observed at Fairgo tomorrow when the feature reaches the halfway point. The feature race will be the Philip J. Arenades handicap.

Long Shot Pays $32.40

Lost and Found and Hecklesie waged a two-horse duel in the curtain-raiser yesterday with Sammy Palumbo sending Lost and Found across the wire a head in front of the favored Hecklesie, backed down to 3 to 5 in the betting. Hecklesie took an early lead and stayed in front until the stretch when Lost and Found, a 15 to 1 choice, closed the gap.

Lost and Found paid $32.40, $10.40 and $5.50 while Hecklesie returned $3.10 and $2.60. Queen Minatoka, the third horse home, paid $8.70. The time for the four and a half furlongs was 56 seconds.

The favored Teco Tack galloped home by four lengths in the second in the betting, second and Rostan, 35 to 1, third. Ridden by Balzaretto, Teco Tack took the lead soon after leaving the barrier and held it throughout.

Teco Tack paid $4.30, $2.60 and $2.50; Fair Flame $2.80 and $2.90 and Rostan $6.00. The time for the six and half furlongs was 1:22.1.

Root Aboard Scotie
Jockey Root booted Scotie to victory in the third with 4 to 5 favorite, Brazen Hussy, second and Coura second. Edith Greenock grabbed the lead soon after leaving the gate with Coura second but heading into the last turn Scotie surged into first place and Brazen Hussy took second where they remained to the finish.

The payoff was Scotie $3.10, $3.00 and $2.70; Brazen Hussy $2.50 and $2.30 and Coura $2.80. The six and a half furlongs were covered by Scotie in 1:23.1.

My One, with Al Boccia on, took the fourth and the M. B. Goss filly made the favorite by the fans, paid only $3.80, $3.20 and $2.60. Seneschal was second and paid its backers $7.00 and $4.20. No Pair, third in the field of eight, returned $3.80.

Seneschal was on top at the first quarter with No Pair second and Bill Bleiweiss third. At the half, Bill Bleiweiss held the lead with Seneschal second and No Pair third. Grouchy into the final turn, My One grabbed the lead and stayed there. My One was clocked in 1:22.4 for the six and a half furlongs.

70 to 1 Shot Almost Wins

Vindicator, a 70 to 1 shot, almost came through in the sixth, finishing second. Ridden by E. Carrillo, Vindicator went ahead in the first quarter and held the pacemaking spot until the stretch when Eyeopener closed the gap and won by a half length. Specialist was third.

Eyeopener's payoff was $7.20, $5.20 and $2.60. Vindicator returned $10.20 for the best price so far and $12.60. Specialist paid $5.50. The

A pre-view of the series for the championship of the Pen-Mar Baseball League may be given tomorrow afternoon when the Queen City Brewers of Cumberland and the Centerville Reds clash at Centerville, Pa.

The Reds annexed the first half title while the Brewers are setting a fast pace in the last half race, leading the second-place Wellersburg (Pa.) outfit by two games. Although Centerville won the first half, the Reds have been turned back four times in five games with the Brewmen. Queen City won the first 5-3, the second 6-1, the fourth 2-0 and the fifth 3-1 while the Pennsylvanians' only triumph, a 12-9 win, came in the third meeting.

Five Games To Play
With only five games to play, Queen City hopes to draw closer to the home stretch bunting. The Brewers have won their last three contests while Centerville has dropped two of its last three and is tied for last place with Mt. Savage.

Manager Howard "Farmer" Northcraft's Mt. Savage tossers will attempt to end a four-game losing streak when they travel to Wellersburg for tomorrow's other engagement. Wellersburg, winner of three of its last four tussles, has defeated Mt. Savage only once—by a 3-2 margin in the last meeting. Savage turned back Wellersburg 4-1, 8-5, 10-1 and 9-2 in the first four clashes between the clubs.

Also coming in for a share of the district baseball spotlight will be the contest between the newly-organized Westvaco Local 36 team, taking up where the Bi-State Colts left off, and the Dormont outfit of the Greater Pittsburgh League tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at Westport's Memorial Park.

Lambert May Pitch
The Dormont club, managed by Bill Fuchs, defeated the Colts 7-1 three weeks ago and proved one of the classiest teams to face the Bi-Staters during their existence. At present, Dormont is in second place in the league and is still in the thick of the fight for a berth in the Greater Pittsburgh Amateur Baseball Federation championship tournament.

Bernard "Bunzy" O'Neill, star pitcher for the University of Tennessee this season and winner over the Colts, will probably do the pitching for Dormont with Ival "Speed" Lambert as his probable foe. Lambert has a record of four victories and three defeats.

Maryland Stickmen Again Trim Hopkins

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Aug. 7 (AP)—The University of Maryland lacrosse team defeated Johns Hopkins 8-0, in the Summer Lacrosse League today for the second time in three weeks.

In a game at Baltimore, July 24, Maryland defeated Johns Hopkins 8-1.

The veteran Maryland team never gave the Hopkins players a chance to get started, overpowering each attack as it developed.

Jack Hoyert, Maryland second defense, turned in the day's star performance, scoring four of Maryland's eight tallies. Milt Vandenberg and Ray Grelecki got two scores each.

Maryland will play the Naval Academy team at Annapolis next Wednesday in the final game of the series.

Today's play was slowed up considerably at the start of the third ten-minute period by weather conditions.

Frostburg State Ten Whips St. John's Crew

FROSTBURG, Aug. 7.—"Dutch" Blank pitched and batted the Frostburg State softball team to a 7-5 victory over St. John's Cumberland in a recent game here, allowing five hits and driving in three runs on a double and single.

Guldahl, Wood Share No. 1 Spot In Canadian Open

Little Ben Hogan Is One Stroke Behind—Tourney Ends Today

TORONTO, Aug. 7 (AP)—Little Ben Hogan, the big money and shot maker from Hershey, Pa., needed 71 strokes today in the second round of the Canadian open golf tourney and reached the halfway point with a total 136—one stroke behind the deadlocked first-place pair of Ralph Guldahl and Craig Wood.

In the first round Hogan smoked around the Mississauga layout in 65.

Guldahl's Day
Today, however, it was Guldahl who shot the spectacular golf. The big Santa Fe, Calif., pro was in trouble all the way but his recovery shots kept him in the running and his putting was deadly. The combination brought him a 35-34—69 over the par 72 course.

Wood also had a 69, equalling par out with a 36 and then applying the pressure for a 33 on the home nine. Hogan today had trouble with every club in his bag and only some brilliant scrambling kept his total as low as 71.

Even his driving was bad. He took a booby six on the fifth—the hole five players eyed yesterday—when his drive bounced out of bounds. And his second shot would have been out of bounds too if it hadn't hit a tree.

36 Holes To Play
Meanwhile, Guldahl and Wood were applying the heat from the start.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo, low amateur in the recent Tam O'Shanter tourney in Chicago, led the slim pure field with 138, adding a 67 today to his first round 71. Skeet Riegall of Miami, Fla., was second with 141, cutting one stroke off his first round score today.

The low 60 scorers and ties after today's play qualified for the final thirty-six holes tomorrow.

Brooklyn Loses 11-Inning Clash To Braves, 2 to 1

Fernandez Scores Winning Run when Casey Deflects West's Grounder

BROOKLYN, Aug. 7 (AP)—The lowly Boston Braves smacked down the Brooklyn Dodgers 2 to 1 in eleven innings tonight, scoring the winning run when Nanny Fernandez tripled after two were out and raced home as Peevée Reese fumbled Max West's grounder which Relief Pitcher Hugh Casey had deflected.

The game was completed just a few minutes before the dimout regulations would have halted play, but even though the Dodgers fell behind in the top half of the eleventh and the score would have reverted to a tie if the contest was stopped, Brooklyn made no attempt to stall.

Boston was held to seven hits by Curt Davis and Casey, but scored first in the second inning on singles by West and Ernie Lombardi and Eddie Miller's long fly.

Al Javery, who yielded 10 hits in acquiring his eighth victory, had comparatively smooth sailing till the eighth when the Dodgers tied the score on a double by Arky Vaughan, Dixie Walker's sacrifice and a fly to right by Joe Medwick.

ELEVEN REASONS FOR SPOTS BEFORE THE EYES

Fireman George A. Cook, of Engine Co. 30 in Forest Hills, New York City, can't make out whether he's seeing things. The spots before his eyes are a litter of pups, seven males and four females, born to Queenie, the company mascot, who is pictured holding her head up proudly as she looks over her brood. Incidentally, the new pups had better look out for Leon Henderson—they're just rolling in rubber.

The Spotlight by GRANTLAND RICE

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

With August getting under way the two big leagues in baseball have run off the road into a combination drain and ditch.

They have come to the point where out of 16 starters they have two good ball clubs and fourteen flops.

This happens to be a sour average—two out of sixteen.

Neither the Yankees nor the Dodgers of 1942 are great ball clubs. They are only good ball clubs. Good—but in no sense great. Yet they have outclassed their two leagues.

The only way they can lose is to start loafing and quit trying. For they have little to beat.

For one example the two Philadelphia clubs combined are 70 games back of the pace. Neither could be classed as a strong minor league outfit.

All of this proves again the complete honesty of baseball in a year where close races were needed.

It also proves the inefficiency of both leagues in building up at least a few teams strong enough to make a few threatening gestures.

There is nothing to be gained now in weeping over the split lactical fluid that gentle bossie brews.

Baseball, being completely honest, has stumbled along the lines of efficiency in the matter of league strength.

The indifferent operations of too many teams will now take their toll.

The Long Lull

The two major races still have eight weeks to go, which means a long lull before the next series.

There is a slight chance that something on the indigo side might happen to either Yankees or Dodgers, but at this spot it is too thin a chance to be visible to the naked eye.

The Cardinals were the only season hope, but they lacked the poise and the experience needed to keep pace with Durocher's veterans.

It was understood in advance the American League had nothing to throw at the Yankees and six National League clubs were out of the race before the first ball was thrown in April.

Naturally this isn't going to help attendance counts.

With two close races this season baseball would have broken all past records, judging by the way other sporting competitions have drawn.

Otherwise Big In what gave promise of being an extremely sour year, golf, for example had drawn its largest crowds.

From 12,000 to 25,000 or 30,000.

War Does Things To Starting Times Of Indians' Games

CLEVELAND, Aug. 7 (Wide World)—What the war hasn't done to starting times of Cleveland baseball games isn't worth mentioning.

At the start of this campaign, it was announced the tribe would play at 4 p. m. week days, 2 Saturdays, 3 Sundays, 9:15 under the floodlights and 1:30 on double-header days.

That adds to five. One week-day game was started at 4:30 to accommodate a large-block ticket purchaser. One bargain bill was started at 1 to oblige sponsors of a patriotic observance. The service-all star clash got under way at 9, and the regular night game starting time was changed to 8:45. The climax came when the Indians staged a two-night twin bill the other day, the first contest starting at 6 and the second at 8:45.

Adding to the confusion of ten starting times, the Indians have two home fields—League park for regular games, and Cleveland stadium, for night, weekend and holiday affairs.

Give up?

When you figure what Claude Passeau has done with the Cubs around him, you get the season's best pitcher up to date.

A war and draft situation that was supposed to equalize the two leagues has worked just the other way.

It has only widened the gap.

Terp Eleven To Meet Lakehurst Sailors

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Aug. 7 (AP)—Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, said today the Maryland football team had scheduled a game with the Lakehurst (N. J.) Naval Training Station to be played in College Park, October 3.

Maryland originally was to play Hampden-Sydney on that date but the Virginia school recently cancelled the game. Another open date for Maryland is November 21, and Byrd said an effort would be made to schedule some service team.

He said Clark Shaughnessy, new head football coach, was expected to return from Chicago the last of the month to begin practice September 1.

USE THEM SEPARATELY
IT IS important to be able to recognize when a declarer must use his trumps separately, for ruffing, instead of using two on a trick to draw out those held by the defenders. To count up a hand with extensive ruffing possibilities, you first add up the number of tricks available with high cards in the side suits and then pile onto that the number of trumps which can be employed one at a time. Always bear in mind that the defenders, if they sense your plan and are on their toes, may lead a trump at you whenever they can, thus making you use up two trumps on those occasions and cutting down by one the number of ruffing tricks.

At one table that contract got made because of logical play by the declarer and a single defensive slip by the defenders. West opened the spade K and, seeing the ruffing situation, switched to his lone heart. South took this with the A and, wishing to set up the spade Q for a club discard, led the spade J. West came in with the A and led the club 4 to the K. The A followed, then the spade Q for discard of the last club, and a ruff of the club 7 with the heart 6.

Now the defenders made their slip. When the diamond J was led, West feared the old gag of such a lead from a K-Q-J combination and came in with his A. Having no trump to return, he led a diamond for a ruff by the heart 10. Then the club 10 was ruffed by the heart 7, the diamond 4 by the heart J, the club 9 by the heart K and the diamond 4 by the heart Q. East winced each time he had to under-ruff, as, if his partner had played low when the diamond J was led, he could have won the trick and returned a trump, compelling the declarer to use two and beating his contract.

At another table South, after winning the trump lead to the second trick, also tried one round of trumps himself. When he shortly thereafter led a diamond, West let East win it and return another trump. There the contract was downed two tricks.

Your Week-End Lesson
If your side has two major suits containing a total of eight cards each between your own hand and the dummy, which is usually the preferred choice as the trump? Why? Can you furnish an example or examples of the reason or reasons?

Production Group Of Red Cross Knits 816 Articles

Women Spend 15,176 Hours Making Garments since Program Began

Individual members of the production committee of Allegany county chapter, American Red Cross, have given 15,176 hours of their time to make 816 garments for use of men in the service, war relief and civilian relief, figures released at Red Cross headquarters in the federal building yesterday.

More than 1,000 pounds of yarn, all provided by the Red Cross, have been used in the project. The total of hours and garments does not include efforts of various knitting and sewing clubs in the city and county that are working with the production committee.

Began in 1939, the program was developed as an aid to war victims in France and England and the different Nazi-occupied countries, but when the United States entered the war in December garments made under the program were converted to use of American citizens.

When American citizens were evacuated from the Hawaiian Islands after Pearl Harbor, clothing for some of them was supplied by the Red Cross. Victims of ships sunk at sea also are supplied with Red Cross-made clothing as well as disaster victims here at home. Mufflers, sweaters and similar garments are being made for men in the service.

Records Outstanding
Records of several women working with the production committee are outstanding, according to the report. Mrs. Joseph Klawan has spent 2,510 hours making 128 garments that include twenty-four men's sweaters, twenty-five women's coat sweaters, twenty-five children's sweaters, eighteen sweaters, eighteen helmets and eighteen mufflers.

In making sixty-one pair of socks, seven pair of mittens and five children's sweaters, Mrs. David Beneman has worked 1,038 hours. Mrs. Henry Shriver knitted sixty-two pair of socks, six children's sweaters and two ladies' coat sweaters in 960 hours; Mrs. Lucile H. Meader knitted twenty-seven men's sweaters with sleeves in 810 hours and Mrs. Andrew Wilson made twenty-six army sweaters and ten pair of socks in 670 hours.

All the work of the local production committee has been done under the direction of Mrs. A. H. Amick, chairman; Mrs. Jim McQuown, acting chairman; and Mrs. M. M. Patterson, sewing chairman.

DRIVER IS FINED $5 FOR FAILING TO GIVE PROPER HAND SIGNAL

Frank McCray, of Corrigansville, was fined $5 and costs yesterday in trial magistrate court on a charge of failing to give a hand signal when making a turn from the Mt. Savage road Thursday near Corrigansville.

His car and a machine driven by Harry Williams, of Mt. Savage, collided as a result, Trooper Milton G. Hart said. Occupants of both cars were uninjured.

A $5 fine against William H. Boor, 202 Avritt avenue, for failing to use a designated traffic lane was suspended in trial magistrate court. Edward P. Martz, 761 Fayette street, was fined $245 for exceeding thirty miles an hour on the McMillen highway. Both were arrested by Trooper Charles D. McLane.

Forfeited Bond
A $10 bond posted more than a year ago by a taxi driver involved in a collision in North Cumberland was forfeited yesterday in Police court. James H. Stein, 178 North Centre street, was charged with careless driving, but the case never came to trial. The mishap occurred June 20, 1941, and Desk Sergt. George W. Deffenbaugh, his wife and a young nephew were injured.

Woman Fined
Jean Knippenberg, Route 2, was fined $1 in police court for driving on a section of Virginia avenue which had been blocked off while street car rails are removed.

PETITION TO CHANGE NAME IS FILED IN CIRCUIT COURT

A petition to change his name to Frank Howard White was filed yesterday in circuit court by Howard Franklin White, 29 Wempe drive.

White, through his attorney, Noel Speil Cook, relates that he was christened Howard Franklin White but always used the name of Frank Howard White.

The name change is requested "to avoid confusion" and because it is "more euphonious."

Woman Fractures Hip In Fall, Cast Is Applied

A cast was applied to the right hip of Mrs. Sarah Weirs, 63 LaVale, yesterday afternoon in Memorial hospital. Mrs. Weirs fractured her hip Thursday when she fell while walking near her home.

George E. Whetzel, 39 Harrison street, was treated in Allegany hospital at 3 p. m. yesterday for an injury of his left thumb. Hospital attaches said Whetzel was repairing an automobile when an axle slipped, striking and splitting his thumb.

Greetings Follow:

Big interest of the week around here seems to be the annual races at Fairgo which opened Tuesday. Crowds the first four days have been considerably under last year but betting the first four days is up several thousand dollars, indicating that folks have more money this year and that most of those going to the races are bettors and not mere spectators. . . . Charles M. Shriver, former superintendent of the Cumberland division of the B. and O. and well known here, has been promoted from general superintendent of the Maryland district at Baltimore to general manager of the New York properties of the company.

Word from Camp O'Connor, at Cascade, where the state guardsmen are training this week, is that the two Cumberland companies are making fine showings in all phases of the training. The guardsmen will return home Sunday. . . . Miss Elizabeth Doub, member of the House of Delegates from Allegany county, and a candidate on the Republican ticket for renomination, announced yesterday she has withdrawn from the race to accept a post as assistant attorney in the Bituminous Coal Division, Department of the Interior, in Washington, D. C. She will begin her duties in Washington Monday.

The July health report shows forty-eight deaths and 130 births in Cumberland, and twenty-eight cases of communicable diseases. . . . Wesley Blackburn, of Keyser, former reporter on the News who has been stationed at Camp Claiborne, La., with the United States Army Signal Corps for several months, was a visitor in the News office last night. He will return to camp the first part of next week. . . . War bond and stamp sales in Allegany county in July totaled $308,000 and exceeded the quota by $41,800. The August quota is $221,300. . . . Funeral services were held here Wednesday for former Mayor Harry Irvine who died Sunday night after a long illness.

Port Cumberland Post No. 13 will present a wrist watch to the rider of the winning horse in the "American Legion Purse" feature at Fairgo tomorrow. . . . Speaking of Port Cumberland post reminds Chatter that the Legion here has collected 4,000 old phonograph records to date. As you all probably know money derived from the sale of the old discs will be used to purchase new records for men in various camps. . . . Dr. William B. Bayer, formerly of this city, has been appointed by the B. and O. as medical examiner for the Cumberland division.

The Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad Company has received permission from the Public Service Commission to discontinue passenger service on its line between Cumberland and Piedmont, W. Va. No date has been set for the final run. To date only two service men, First Lieut. David Herbert "Jock" Murrie and Second Lieut. Donald R. Moore, are the only two Cumberlanders in service to apply for balloons to use in the primary election Sept. 8. . . . Well, so long until next week. Good luck.

POWERFUL AIR RAID SIREN WILL BE TESTED HERE NEXT WEEK

An air raid warning siren, developed by the Chrysler corporation, that can be heard over an area of nine square miles will be tested here early next week. Oscar Gurley, Cumberland Chrysler distributor, announced last night.

Gurley said he was notified yesterday that the siren, built on a Chrysler automobile chassis, will be brought here for a test but added that he was not informed of the exact date although it will be early next week.

The siren, because it is mounted on an automobile chassis, is mobile and can be propelled and driven anywhere, Gurley explained. It is operated by a gasoline motor which forces air through sound tubes mounted on the rear of the chassis. The tubes emit a shrill penetrating sound that can be heard over a vast area.

Successful tests of the siren have been staged in New York, Chicago and other large cities.

Harry A. Porch Is Named Member Of War Price and Rationing Board

General Chairman of B. of L. F. and E. Appointed by State Director

Appointment of Harry A. Porch, LaVale, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad system, to War Price and Rationing Board No. 1-1 by Leo H. McCormick, state OPA director, was announced yesterday by Robert E. Barnard, chairman of the local board.

Porch becomes the fourth member of the board here and his appointment is expected to provide the board with the labor viewpoint toward rationing, official circles reported last night. Other members of board No. 1-1 are Barnard, Daniel F. McMullen and Harold W. Smith.

In referring to his appointment last night, Porch said "It's an honor, of course. Anything I can do in LOCAL PAPERS RECEIVE CITATION—The Cumberland News and the Evening and Sunday Times yesterday received a citation from the United States Treasury Department in recognition of the publicity promotion given by Cumberland papers to the War Bond campaign from its inception and particularly during the intensive campaign in July. The citation signed by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., secretary of the treasury and Gov. Herbert R. O'Connor, honorary chairman of the Maryland War Savings Committee reads, "For distinguished services rendered in behalf of the National Defense Savings Program, this citation is awarded to the Cumberland Evening and Sunday Times and The Cumberland News." Shown in the above picture (left to right) are, William L. Geppert, managing editor of the News; Joseph B. Finan, publisher of the Times and News; John R. Wilkinson, advertising manager of the papers and chairman of the advertising committee of the Retail Merchants Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce and Charles A. Piper, member of the Maryland War Savings Committee, who made the presentation.

Rep. Byron Quits Democratic Race For Renomination

Says She Didn't Expect Opposition as Incumbent Representative

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 (AP)—Representative Katherine E. Byron (D-Md.) announced today she had withdrawn as a candidate for renomination in the Sixth Congressional district of Maryland.

Mrs. Byron issued a statement explaining that she had not expected opposition for the Democratic nomination. Aides said that shortly after she announced her candidacy, Colonel E. Brooke Lee of Silver Spring announced he also would seek the Democratic nomination.

"I had not expected opposition as incumbent representative due to my 100 per cent voting record for the war effort under the leadership of our great president," Mrs. Byron said in the statement. "However, my expectation was not realized."

Mrs. Byron's husband, Representative William D. Byron, was killed in an airplane accident near Atlanta on February 27, 1941. She was elected to a special election in May, 1941, to complete his unexpired term.

"As a widow and the mother of five sons," her statement said, "I realize that they are entitled to more personal attention and companionship than I would be able to give them if I were engaged in a long, drawn-out campaign. Then, too, it would be necessary for me to carry the entire financial burden of the campaign, which under the circumstances I feel would be unfair to my children."

"At this time I want to say that I am grateful for the honor bestowed upon me when I was elected to serve the unexpired term of my late husband — the honor of being representative from Maryland. To all of my friends in my district I am more than grateful for their support. During the remainder of my term my office will be open at all times and when they should be conducted."

Committees Are Named To Collect Scrap Metal in Allegany County

WITHDRAWS—Rep. Katherine E. Byron withdrew her name as a candidate for the Democratic nomination from the Sixth Congressional district yesterday. Mrs. Byron was elected to the office in May 1941 to succeed her husband, William D. Byron, who was killed in an airplane accident.

Community Chest, War Relief Drives May Be Combined

Questionnaires on Proposal Have Been Mailed to 175 Local Persons

The possibility that the Community Chest and War Relief drives here will be combined was revealed yesterday by Harold W. Smith, president of the Community Chest.

Smith said he mailed questionnaires to 175 persons in order to determine if the drives should be combined and when they should be conducted.

Questionnaires were sent to directors of the various chest agencies, members of the War Relief Review committee, chest campaign workers and fifty of the larger contributors to the chest.

Each questionnaire asked the recipient if he favors combining the drives, if the chest campaign should be changed to the fall or if the war relief drive should be conducted in the fall and the chest campaign in the spring.

Replies are requested by August 14 since directors will meet in the chamber of commerce offices at that time to discuss the opinions received.

Cumberland already has raised $147,000 in campaigns in 1942 for Central Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, War Relief and Community Chest. Goal for the proposed War Relief drive will be $50,000.

Bartenders Local Picnic This Sunday

The annual picnic of Bartenders Local No. 569 will be held Sunday at Smouse's beach, Christie road. A program of athletic events will be held and refreshments will be served.

Further Plans Will Be Discussed at Meeting Monday Night

Committee chairman and assistants were named last night for the scrap metal collection in Allegany county. Various phases of the four-point scrap metal collection program were outlined by Porter D. Collins, co-chairman for the county, and W. Donald Smith, city chairman.

The program is divided into four plans. Collections from farms acting in co-operation with farm implement dealers; industrial salvage at local plants which is now underway; special projects such as the removal of old street car rails and demolishing of vacant buildings and unused bridges and the collection of small lots of scrap metals from individual homes.

Allegany county has been assigned a quota of 7,000 tons of scrap metal to be collected in the next four months. Experienced junk dealers present at last night's conference said this quota is not too high as every home has at least 100 or 200 pounds of scrap metal lying about.

Ralph McHenry, county farm agent, and Miss Maud Bean, county home demonstration agent, were named co-chairman of the farm program. This program will get underway as soon as farmers have completed their harvests.

Bart Lyons is chairman of the industrial collection which has been active for several months. John Carscaden, county engineer, was named chairman of the special projects group. Leo T. Downey, district state roads engineer, will handle bridges and highway reclamation projects. While W. Donald Smith has charge of the city house canvassing plan.

Other chairman named last night were G. Pennington Richards, of radio station WTBO, publicity chairman. John D. Wilkinson, of the Times and Allegany Company and Arthur Litzberg were also named to this committee.

Chairman of allied groups were as follows—William J. Cramer, Sr., for the rubber industry and R. B. MacBeth for the oil industry. Both were active in the scrap rubber salvage campaign recently. It was pointed out last night that scrap rubber is also needed as persons having any on their premises should turn it in to gasoline stations along with the scrap metal.

Another meeting will be held Monday at 8 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce office, Liberty Trust building, to further plans for the scrap metal collection.

Portion of West Side Is Plunged Into Darkness

Three Electric Wires on Fayette Street Break and Begin Burning

A portion of the West Side was plunged into darkness last night about 10:30 o'clock when three electric wires atop a pole on Fayette street in the 500-block broke and fell to the ground and began to burn. Two of the wires came in contact and sputtered and burned for over half an hour.

Nearby residents called West Side firemen who responded. They kept a large crowd of spectators away from the live wires until Potomac Edison Company workmen arrived to repair the damage.

The "miniature" blackout caused numerous telephone calls to the News office by West Side residents. Street lights on Fayette, Washington, Cumberland, Greene, and South Lee streets and Wills Creek avenue were out and some house lights were put out of commission on some of the streets.

Firemen could not decide just what caused the wires to break but said they might have been brought together by branches of a tree midway between two poles and formed a short circuit. Residents nearby said they heard a loud humming noise just before they noticed the fallen wires.

East Side Fire Company answered a false alarm at 10:30 p. m. at the corner of Holland street and Columbia avenue when someone pulled the switch in Box No. 36.

Red Cross Discusses Getting Relief To Americans Held by the Japanese

Issues Statement on Subject and Also on Mailing Parcels to Prisoners

The local Red Cross headquarters has received an announcement from National Red Cross headquarters, Washington, D. C., on two subjects which will be of interest to parents of Allegany county men who were with the United States Army, Navy or Marines in the Philippines.

The first statement concerns relief to prisoners of war in Japan and Japanese occupied territory. "The American Red Cross has been ever conscious of the grief and anxiety of parents, wives and relatives of the men taken prisoner by the Japanese," the statement says, "but the American Red Cross would not be justified in holding out hope of a successful relief mission to these prisoners unless the means of sending relief supplies were available."

"When delivered in Japan they will be distributed to American military and civilian prisoners in (Continued on Page 12, Col. 2)

Court Is Asked To Determine Ownership of Car

Necessary for Administration of Estate; Defendant Claims Title

The circuit court yesterday was asked to determine the question of title and ownership of an automobile so that the estate of the late Robert L. Brown, 325 Central avenue, can be properly administered by its administrator, Morgan C. Harris.

Harris, as administrator, filed the suit against Rufus King who contends the automobile was given to him by Brown as a gift.

Brown, a resident of Allegany county, died July 2, 1942, in Clarksburg, Va., and, according to the bill of complaint filed by Harris, owned a 1940 model four door Buick sedan.

Prior to his appointment as administrator and after Brown was in Clarksburg, Harris relates that he received from King title and keys to the automobile. When Harris received the keys and title, however, King told him that he (King) had been given the car by Brown, the bill states. The title was endorsed in blank, Harris declares.

The question, Harris says, is to determine if the automobile constitutes an asset of Brown's estate or if it belongs to King.

The court is asked to determine title and ownership of the automobile by issuing a declaratory decree under provisions of the Declaratory Judgments act of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

In his answer to Harris's suit, King, through his attorney, William S. Jenkins, asserts that the automobile was given to him by Brown in February, 1942, and since that time has been his sole property, free of all the claims of the complainant.

Title to the car, King relates, was endorsed by Brown who intended to acknowledge it before a notary public when it was convenient.
